PREFACE

In its general plan the present edition of Caesar is based on that of Lowe and Ewing, first published in 1891. It retains the features which gave distinction to that book, the most important of which are thus described in its preface:

"The vocabularies, notes, illustrations, and explanatory matter have been placed on the same page with the text, thus saving the student's time, which is uselessly spent in turning leaves and searching for explanations which are here placed immediately before him. At the same time, self-reliance is secured by the use of a separate text in the class room, without either notes or vocabulary. The special vocabularies have been arranged so that the first four books and the rest of the annotated text may be read consecutively, or the war with Ariovistus (Bk. I, chaps. 30-54) may be omitted and the valuable and less familiar, matter substituted from the annotated chapters of Bks. V-VII. An opportunity for sight reading is afforded in the unannotated parts of these latter books."

While the general plan of the earlier edition has been followed, in all details the book has been rewritten from beginning to end. In its preparation three definite purposes have been kept steadily in mind:

1. To help the pupil to follow the narrative understandingly.

2. To give the pupil, especially at the beginning of his reading, a systematic drill on all the common syntactical principles.

3. To exclude all bits of antiquarian and grammatical lore which, however valuable in themselves, have no direct bearing on an appreciation of Caesar's language or story.

The Study of Caesar's Narrative. It is surely a pedagogical mistake to let a pupil carry away from the study of Caesar nothing but a memory of ablatives absolute and indirect discourse. These things he must learn as a preparation for further reading, it is true, and the language must be his chief study; but there is danger that a year of grammar only will not tempt him to the further reading for which he has been preparing. Caesar tells an interesting story and tells it well. The universal testimony of the ages to the greatness of his writing is not founded on a universal love for grammar. The interest in finding out what Caesar did should serve as an incentive to solve his sentences. Moreover, a neglect of Caesar's thought is wrong on principle. The habit of careful attention to the subject-matter is the one thing best worth cultivating, whether one reads English or a foreign language; and this should not be forgotten in teaching Caesar.

Therefore as much as possible has been done in the notes and maps to assist in an understanding of the narrative, without introducing any discussion of disputed points. Every effort has been made to adopt the most reasonable theory for each campaign, and to make every note, plan, and map consistent with that theory.

The pupil's progress through the story must be slow, and, however well he understands each move in Caesar's game, he will have difficulty in grasping the whole. It is hoped that the campaign maps may lessen this difficulty by putting before the eyes the total results of the campaigns. In each map the route is laid out on a map of all Gaul, because only in this way can the relation of any one campaign to the whole of Caesar's task be kept constantly before the mind. The system of coloring shows the condition of Gaul at the end of each campaign,—how much had been reduced by fighting, how much had yielded without fighting, and how much was yet untouched. A comparison of any two maps will show the results of the intervening operations.

System in Grammar References. An attempt has been made to facilitate and even insure, early in the study of Caesar, a systematic drill on the more important case and mode constructions. In the notes on Book I, 1-29, it is believed that references are given for all the most common constructions. In general, the cases are emphasized during the earlier chapters, and the modes during the later. To each construction reference is made three times, two sets of references being given close together, that they may reenforce each other, and the third after a few chapters, that the point may be clinched by review. And these references are made not only to the grammatical Appendix given in this book, but also to five leading grammars.

In Book II the same references are given, as nearly as possible in the same order; but the references for each chapter are grouped together after the notes of that chapter. In this way opportunities for the same grammatical drill are afforded, whether the class begins with Book I or Book II; but, if the class begins with Book I, these references in Book II may be omitted as unnecessary.

With such a system it is natural and right to postpone to later chapters or books the consideration of certain constructions. Thus, conditions and the details of indirect discourse are postponed to Book I, 30–54, tenses to Book III. If the teacher does not like the order of presentation he can easily supply needed references; but if he will insist on the study of the references as they come in the notes, it is believed that he will find the necessary ground covered thoroughly and systematically.

Exclusion of Non-essentials. Many things are known or are guessed about ancient military science which in no way help the pupil to understand Caesar. Many facts and theories of grammar are suggested by Caesar's language which the pupil might find useful at some later day, but which help him neither in translating Caesar nor in writing the Latin composition which should accompany the reading. An honest attempt has been made to give what is helpful and to exclude the useless lumber, though it is not hoped, much less expected, that all teachers would draw the line where the editor has drawn it.

Beginning with Book II. The most dreaded portions of Caesar are his indirect discourse. and unfortunately the majority of the speeches are found in the first book. Though the fear of indirect discourse is largely traditional, and though the construction is not really difficult for one who is properly grounded in the essentials of Latin, yet it is clearly a misfortune that the pupil should encounter its full difficulties at a time when the ordinary narrative gives him trouble enough. Moreover, it is questionable whether it is worth while to drill the pupil on all details of the construction, since he will see very little indirect discourse elsewhere in his preparatory course. For these reasons many teachers seek to make the pupil's path easier by reading the second book before the first, or by omitting chapters 30–54 of the first book, in which chapters the construction chiefly abounds. In preparing this edition everything possible has been done to make feasible either of these plans, without throwing any obstacles in the way of a consecutive reading from the first. But the editor feels strongly that Book I, 1–29 should be read first. The latter part of the book may well be omitted entirely, and one or more of the very interesting annotated portions of the last three books may be substituted for it.

No editor of Caesar can escape a debt of gratitude to Mr. T. Rice Holmes for having discussed with such impartiality and thoroughness the geographical and military questions of the Gallic War. Caesar's Conquest of Gaul, by Mr. Holmes, should be in the hands of every teacher of Caesar. Though the present editor has found it impossible to agree with all its conclusions, the book is so fair in its discussions that he is under equal obligations whether he agrees or disagrees with the author.

The text of the Lowe and Ewing edition was Kraner's. In the present edition Meusel's readings have been substituted for the most part, but not completely. The quantities are marked in accordance with the revised edition of Lane's Grammar. A few doubtful words were submitted to the decision of Professor Hanns Oertel, of Yale University, who prepared the chapter on Sound in that Grammar. For his ready assistance, thanks are due.

It would be impossible to mention by name all who have assisted the editor by suggestion and in various ways. The labor of preparing the Vocabulary was largely performed by Mr. Earl W. Murray, a former graduate student, now Assistant Professor in the University of Kansas. Mr. Murray also prepared the first draft of the systematized references for Book I, 1-29, and Book II. For the preparation of the Index the editor is indebted to Miss Martha Whitney. Professor Charles Knapp, of Columbia University, gave the early part of the book the benefit of a most searching and helpful criticism. From beginning to end the editor has been under deep obligations to the editors-in-chief of the series.

INTRODUCTION

I. The Importance of the Gallic Campaigns

The Commentaries on the Gallic War are Caesar's own story 1 of how he conquered the peoples living in what is now France and some of the lands bordering on France. He has told his story simply and directly. It was his genius that made the conquest possible, and the story could not be true without making this evident; but he has spoken of himself as if the writer and the general were different men, and there is no boasting. He has not explained to us the great importance of the war to the Roman state; there is no suggestion of its importance to his personal career; much less has he hinted at his own importance in the history of Rome and the world. These things must be learned from a study of history, not from Caesar's story.

Effect on Rome. Rome was the governing nation of ancient 2 times. In Caesar's time she had conquered the other nations which touched the Mediterranean, and was governing most of them as provinces; that is, she sent Roman governors to them and collected taxes from them. In this way she governed a comparatively narrow strip of land in southern Gaul; and as this was the particular province which Caesar was sent to govern, he calls it simply "the Province," Prōvincia (see map). This province was only partially protected by mountains and rivers from the semicivilized and warlike Gauls on the north; and for this reason it could never be sure of peace and safety until the rest of Gaul was conquered. Moreover, the land on the north was productive and well worth having.

Therefore Caesar's conquest of Gaul was justified, from a Roman point of view, both by the value of the land and by the necessity of protecting the Province.

3 Effect on Gaul. But there was a better reason for that conquest. Though the Gauls were brave they were no match for the less civilized Germans, who lived across the Rhine. Just at the time when Caesar took command of his province the Germans had begun crossing the Rhine in great numbers and were driving the Gauls out of their homes. If this movement had not been checked, the homeless Gauls would have been driven to attack Roman territory; and if the Gauls had been exterminated between the Germans and the Romans, then the Romans would have found the Germans still more dangerous neighbors than the Gauls. For the Gauls themselves, too, it was far better to be conquered by the civilized Romans than by the uncivilized Germans. The one means of safety for both Gauls and Romans was that the Romans should govern all the country west of the Rhine and should hold the Germans at bay on the other side of that great river. This was the result of Caesar's conquest of Gaul; and this result is the great justification of his bloody warfare there.

4 Effect on Caesar. In their effect on Caesar's own career the Gallic campaigns were all-important, and his career changed the course of history. In Gaul he gained military experience and the devotion of his army. By the aid of that army he overthrew a constitution under which the Roman state was going to ruin, and laid the foundations of an empire which lived for centuries. No doubt he did this from selfish and ambitious motives; but his ambition was so great that it could never have been satisfied until he had brought the empire he ruled to the highest possible degree of excellence, and his genius was so great that he saw the needful measures and the means to carry them out. The daggers of his assassins gave him too short a time to complete his work; but he did enough to prove himself the greatest man in Roman history.

II. Life of Caesar

Early Years, and Choice of Party. Gaius Julius Caesar was 5
born in the year[1] 102, B.C., on the 12th day of the month which was then called Quintilis, but which we now, in his honor, call July. Tradition traced the descent of the Julian family back beyond the foundation of Rome, and even to the goddess Venus as its remote ancestor Caesar, therefore, belonged to the Roman nobility, and in the continuous strife between the Senatorial, or Aristocratic, and the Democratic parties, might have been expected to side with the aristocrats. But none of his own family had been very conspicuous in the state, and his aunt had married Marius, the greatest leader of the Democratic party, the great general who had saved Rome by his victories over the Cimbri and Teutoni. It was natural that his ambition should be fired by his uncle's career, and that his sympathies should incline toward the Democratic party. When he was only fifteen Marius made him priest of Jupiter, an office of some honor and few duties; and in 83, after the death of Marius, he deliberately identified himself with the Democratic party by marrying Cornelia, the daughter of the new leader of that party, Cinna.

Overthrow of Caesar's Party. But the power of the Demo- 6 cratic party was almost at an end. In 83 Sulla, the leader of the Aristocratic party, returned to Italy with his victorious army, after fighting for several years against Mithradates, in the East. A bloody contest drove the Democrats from power; and in 82 the victor, determined to make a revival of that party impossible, slaughtered its eminent men and so changed the constitution of the state that the Senate was in full control. The young Caesar, as nephew of Marius and son-in-law of Cinna, was too conspicuous to be overlooked. Sulla ordered him to divorce Cornelia. Caesar refused, and had to flee for his life until influential friends persuaded Sulla to pardon him. Sulla's grudging consent is said to have been coupled with the warning that Caesar would prove as dangerous as many Mariuses.

7 Weakness of Opposite Party. But the form of government set up by Sulla did not stand long, and the years which followed his death made more and more clear the need of some strong man who should give order and stability to the state. During those same years Caesar was testing and developing the powers which were to make him the man to do this work.

8 Revival of Caesar's Party. When Sulla died, in 78, the Senate was in complete control: the Democratic party had neither a leader nor any chance to use its strength. Gradually the Senate lost this control, until, in 70, under the consuls Pompey and Crassus, the changes made by Sulla were completely done away with and the Democratic party again had an opportunity, if it could but find a leader. For a time Pompey seemed likely to be this leader. In 66 the people, contrary to the wishes of the Senatorial party, elected him general to serve against Mithradates. This gave him supreme control in Asia Minor, but kept him out of Rome for the next four years.

9 Development of Caesar's Powers. During all this time Caesar was developing his powers of leadership. He got a taste of military service in Asia Minor, and at twenty-two he won the civic crown of oak leaves for saving the life of a fellow citizen in battle; but as yet he seems to have had no thought of gaining distinction as general. A born politician, he loved the game of politics for its own sake as well as for its rewards. An excellent orator, both by nature and by training, he used his oratorical powers in furthering the plans of his party. He made friends easily, and his influence over them was strong. Therefore, before he was old enough to take office he was a great favorite with the people and a much sought for ally in political scheming; and at the earliest age permitted by law he was elected without difficulty to the offices of Quaestor (for 68), Aedile (for 65), and Praetor (for 62). The greatest test of his popularity came in 63, when the office of Pontifex Maximus fell vacant and Caesar was elected to this most honorable position over the strongest candidate the Senatorial party could put forward.

Caesar's First Military Command. But in spite of his ability 10 and popularity, in the year 63 Caesar was thought of as only a shrewd politician. Rome looked upon Pompey as her greatest man, because he was her greatest general; and Caesar knew that if he should come into conflict with Pompey his shrewdness could never prove a match for Pompey's army and generalship. Caesar felt that he too must be a general, but he did not know whether he could be; for he had never had an opportunity to try his powers. The opportunity offered itself in 61, when he was sent to govern a part of Spain. There he fought with great success against some of the native tribes. His victories were not very important in themselves, and they attracted no great attention in Rome; but they showed Caesar what he could do and made him anxious for a larger field of operations.

Caesar's Consulship. Caesar now wanted the consulship, the 11 highest office in the state: if he got it he intended to carry through some measures which would be opposed by the Senatorial party. He therefore needed strong friends. Pompey had returned in triumph from the war with Mithradates, but the Senate had refused to grant some reasonable requests which he had made of it. Crassus too had a grievance against the Senate. With these two men Caesar made a secret agreement that each should further the interests of the others; and thus Caesar, Pompey, and Crassus formed what is known in history as the First Triumvirate, a mere personal agreement, with no public sanction. The influence of Pompey and Crassus helped in securing Caesar's election to the consulship for the year 59, and also assisted him, when consul, in passing measures which were for the advantage of each of the three allies. For himself Caesar t ok a five-year term of office as governor of Cisal-pine Gaul (the northern part of Italy), Illyricum (north and east of the Adriatic Sea), and Transalpine Gaul (then including only the southern part of France). To protect these provinces he was given an army of four legions.

12 Caesar's Command in Gaul. In 58, therefore, Caesar entered upon his command. Partly because it was best for the province and the state (cf. 2 and 3), and partly because he needed the training and the reputation of a general (cf. 10), he determined to conquer all the rest of Gaul. How he did this he tells us himself in the Commentaries; and a brief summary prefixed to each book in this edition makes it unnecessary to tell the story here. Since he found the five years originally given him too short for the full accomplishment of his purpose, he secured an additional five years. By the year 50 the last trace of resistance to Roman authority had been crushed, and Caesar's great task was completed. Moreover, he now had a perfectly disciplined, veteran army, enthusiastically devoted to its leader.

13 Outbreak of Civil War. It was high time that Caesar should have his hands free, for a greater task lay before him. For several years Pompey and Crassus had looked out for his interests in Rome. But in 53 Crassus was killed in battle; and at about the same time Pompey began to feel jealous of Caesar's success and fearful of his power. He gradually turned away from Caesar and attached himself to the Senatorial party, which had always hated Caesar. On the first day of the year 49 the Senate voted that Caesar should lay down his command and return to Rome as a private citizen, though the time for which the command had been given him had not yet expired. Caesar was then in Cisalpine Gaul, and his reply was an immediate march toward Rome.

14 Weakness of the Constitutional Government. But during Caesar's absence from Rome the complete failure of the constitutional form of government had shown that the so-called republic could not exist much longer. Trials and elections were decided by bribery and bloodshed. The governing party had been so weak that for one entire year a succession of riots had prevented the holding of elections. Now when it was attacked by Caesar it again showed its weakness. Although it had taken steps which were sure to bring on civil war it had done nothing to prepare for that war, except to appoint Pompey its commander-in-chief. In about two months from the time when Caesar marched into northern Italy, Pompey set sail from southern Italy with his army and most of the Senate, leaving Rome and Italy in Caesar's hands.

Civil War Makes Caesar Master of Rome. But the hardest 15 fighting of his life lay before Caesar. Pompey had crossed the Adriatic only to gain time for preparation. Besides, while Pompey's strong army lay on the east of Italy, there was another large army of Caesar's enemies in Spain, on the west. But Caesar's magnificent army and wonderful generalship carried him through all difficulties. In 49 he marched to Spain and defeated his enemies there. In 48 he followed Pompey across the Adriatic and utterly routed his army in the great battle of Pharsalus. Pompey himself fled to Egypt and was assassinated by order of the counselors of the Egyptian king. Caesar followed him to Egypt with an insufficient force and was blockaded for several months in the city of Alexandria by the Egyptian army. Meanwhile the remnants of Pompey's army made their way to the northern coast of Africa, and a new army was there organized to oppose Caesar. In 46 Caesar defeated this army too, at Thapsus, so decisively that he is said to have lost but fifty men while fifty thousand of the enemy fell. Then the sons of Pompey rallied the last opponents of Caesar, in Spain, for a final struggle, and Caesar's victory at Munda in 45 made him the undisputed master of the Roman world.

Caesar as Statesman. Caesar was no mere soldier, and it was 16 from no choice of his own that he spent all these years in fighting. He became a general because that was the only way to achieve his purpose of becoming sole ruler of Rome. But that purpose was not prompted wholly by personal ambition.

He had begun as a politician and had matured into a great statesman. There had been many abuses in the state, and the civil war had brought in confusion as well. With characteristic energy and clear-sightedness he set himself to bring order out of chaos, to organize the whole empire, and to improve its details. To carry out this work he needed the best men in the state, regardless of party: hence he pardoned those who had fought against him and gave some of them positions of high honor and great responsibility. He reformed the calendar. He took measures to remedy the financial disorders of the country. He planned a codification of the laws. He intended to carry out some great engineering feats, among others the cutting of a canal through the isthmus of Corinth. In order to protect the frontiers of the empire he planned military expeditions against the Parthians and the nations along the Danube.

17 Assassination of Caesar. Such enormous plans needed time for their execution, and time was denied to Caesar. A form of government which had stood for centuries could not be overthrown without grieving some true lovers of their country. One man could not make himself the master of all others, who had previously been his equals, without arousing jealousy. One man could not select the men to fill all offices without disappointing many. Men of all these classes, patriots, would-be rivals, and disappointed office seekers, joined in a conspiracy, and on the fifteenth of March, 44 B.C., Caesar fell beneath their daggers while presiding over a meeting of the Senate. The history of the following years shows the folly of this murder. For themselves the assassins reaped only death, since in a very few years every one whose fate is known had died by violence. For the state the deed was equally disastrous, since the assassination of Caesar merely caused a bloody civil war to intervene between his rule and that of Augustus.

IV. Caesar as General

19 The Commentaries present Caesar to our view as a military leader of the first rank, and yet he had reached middle life before he held an independent command. During his youth, when the fascinations of "war's wild trade" may have attracted him, all the channels to military preferment were closed to him on account of his connection with the Marian party. When he finally turned his attention to war, he brought the calm calculation of the man of affairs seeking to accomplish certain desirable ends through its agency. Neither the charm nor the traditions of camp and field life held sway over his mind. Love of military glory alone never lured him on, nor was the sweep of his genius hampered by the shackles of an exclusively military training.

20 Characteristics as General. The Commentaries reveal his method. He clearly conceived the object desired and took the most direct way possible to reach it. When it best suited his purpose he was deliberate and cautious, watching for the best opportunity to strike a crushing blow. Yet in an emergency he would coolly carry out the most daring plans, so that he sometimes appears even reckless; but this apparent recklessness was the result of swift and unerring decision, based on a keen insight into the character and probable action of his opponents. He always took the offensive and endeavored to concentrate his force and strike the enemy unexpectedly. He made up by quickness of movement for his lack of numbers. In battle he was cool and confident. He was devoid of fear, and when necessary fought in the foremost ranks. If the enemy fled he pursued him vigorously with his cavalry, slaughtering without mercy as long as a man was to be reached. He was sometimes cruel from policy, though naturally clement.

21 Power over his Men. Caesar won the entire devotion of his army, and this was one of the secrets of his success. He was careful of the comfort and lives of his men. He saw to it that they had an abundance of supplies. He cautioned them against unnecessary risk in battle, and sometimes refused to allow them to fight in dangerous places even when they wished to do so. He ruled by tact rather than by fear. He generously rewarded their valor and fidelity, and knew how to rouse them on occasion to the highest pitch of enthusiasm. But such statements only partially account for his ascendency over their minds. He possessed in the fullest measure that combination of natural qualities which makes a man a born leader. Therefore his army was the obedient instrument of his will and endured unexampled hardships without a murmur.

V. Caesar as Author

Caesar's genius was many-sided, and he might have been no 22 less eminent as an orator and an author than as a statesman and a general, if he had chosen those fields of activity for their own sake. Even as it was, though he spoke and wrote mainly for political effect, he was recognized by his contemporaries as an orator second only to Cicero, and the simplicity, clearness, and terseness of his Commentaries have made them a classic from his day to our own. In the purity of their Latinity they rank with Cicero's works as the best that have come down to us. The interest of the narrative and the quality of the generalship shown in it have made the book a favorite with some of the world's greatest generals. The great Napoleon, for example, recommended it to his officers and himself wrote an abstract of it.

Purpose in Writing the Commentaries on the Gallic War. 23
Yet the book was written hastily, probably in the winter of 52-51, after the events narrated in Book VII; and it was written for a political purpose. Absent from Rome and deprived of his two chief supporters by the death of Crassus and the alienation of Pompey, Caesar wished to put himself in a good light before the Roman people. With such a purpose he might have been expected to misstate some facts; and there have been many attempts to show that he did so. But a fair examination of these attempts shows that not one of them is well-founded. There may be occasional mistakes, where Caesar was forced to rely on information furnished him by the Gauls; but it can not be proved that there is a single intentional false statement in the whole work.

24 Caesar's Other Writings. In addition to the Commentaries on the Gallic War, in seven books, we have Caesar's Commentaries on the Civil War, in three books. Besides these we know of other works, now lost. We hear of some poetry and a collection of jests. He wrote a treatise on grammar while traveling rapidly from Rome to Spain. He wrote a treatise on astronomy when he reformed the calendar. He wrote an attack on Cato to counteract the effect of certain books which in praising Cato attacked Caesar. All this shows his versatility; but probably no one of these works would have been very valuable if it had been preserved.

VI. The Gauls

25 First Appearance of the Gauls in History. Some seven centuries before Christ, a tall, fair-haired race of men, the Gauls, began crossing the Rhine and conquering the original inhabitants of the country on its west. In time they overran everything as far as the Pyrenees, partly destroying the original inhabitants, partly uniting with them. About five centuries before Christ they began crossing the Alps and settling in northern Italy, and in 390 B.C. they took Rome and burned it. Rome was then but a small city, governing only the part of Italy which immediately surrounded it.

26 First Decline of Gallic Power. But from that time on the power of Rome increased and that of the Gauls decreased. A little more than two centuries before Christ, after desperate fighting, the Romans conquered and held northern Italy, Cisalpine Gaul. Again in the years from 123 to 118 there was hard fighting with Gauls, and at the end Rome controlled that part of Gaul which Caesar calls Prōvincia (see 2).

Invasion of Cimbri and Teutoni. In 113 began the invasion 27 of the Cimbri and Teutoni, the most terrible danger of Rome since the day when the Gauls burned the city. It is not known whether they were Germans or Gauls, and probably the Romans of the time did not discriminate between the two races. They crossed the Rhine with their women and children, and marched slowly through Gaul, leaving a waste wherever they had passed. Several Roman armies met them and were cut to pieces. At last they made ready to invade Italy, the Teutoni by the western Alps, the Cimbri by the eastern. But the great Marius was now in command of a Roman army. In 102 he met the Teutoni and destroyed them. In 101 he joined the other Roman army and destroyed the Cimbri.

Geographical Divisions of Gaul in Caesar's Time. In Caesar's 28 time Cisalpine Gaul was almost as Roman as any other part of Italy. From it Caesar recruited his legions and levied new ones; and later he gave its inhabitants the right of Roman citizenship. The Province was peaceable and loyal to Rome, although the Allobroges had rebelled only a few years before. Caesar's task was the subjugation of all the rest of the Gauls, the inhabitants of all the country lying north of the Province and west of the Rhine. This is the country which he calls Gallia. However, he divides it into three parts and often uses the name Gallia of only the great central part, Gallia Celtica, where the Gallic stock was purest. In the southwestern part, Aquitania, fewer of the Gallic invaders had settled, and the population consisted largely of descendants of the original inhabitants. In the northeastern part, Belgium, Germans had settled in large numbers.

Factions in Gaul. If Caesar had found Gaul a compact 29 nation his task would have been more difficult than it was. But faction and division seem to have been a part of the Gallic nature, and he took advantage of this characteristic. Gaul was cut up into many small states, each feeling itself rightfully independent. These states fought frequently with one another, and the weaker of them were either forced into dependence on the stronger or voluntarily attached themselves to stronger states for protection. In this way loose leagues or confederations were formed, between which rivalry and warfare went on. In Gallia Celtica the chief confederations were the one headed by the Haedui and the one formerly headed by the Arverni, but in Caesar's time headed by the Sequani. But the evils of faction did not stop here. The individual states, for the most part, had no strong governments. Apparently most of them had been governed by kings one or two generations before Caesar's time; but a series of revolutions had generally abolished the kingly office and had substituted magistrates elected yearly. The real power lay in the hands of rich nobles, or equites as Caesar calls them. Each of these nobles lived surrounded by numerous slaves and retainers; and as there was no power strong enough to keep them in order, individual nobles or leagues of nobles sometimes pushed their continuous rivalries to the point of civil war.

30 Caesar's Use of the Gallic Factions. This factional spirit was of great assistance to Caesar, for he usually found means to attach one faction or the other to himself. For example, at the outset he found two factions in the state of the Haedui, headed by two brothers, Diviciacus, friendly to the Romans, and Dumnorix, hostile to them. By strengthening Diviciacus and checking Dumnorix he secured the help of the state. The state was the leader of one of the two leagues in Celtic Gaul, and Caesar thus secured the submission of all the states in that league without fighting for it. In fact, not only did he have their passive submission, but he obtained from them provisions and men to use in conquering other parts of Gaul.

31 Gallic Civilization. The details of the Gallic manners and customs can be learned best from Chapters 11-20 of Book VI. It will be enough to say here that in Caesar's time the Gauls were not wild barbarians, but had attained a considerable degree of civilization. They had long passed the stage of roaming about from one part of the country to another; though we find, in the first book of the Commentaries, that for special reasons the Helvetii intended to leave their homes and find new ones. They had roads and bridges and towns of considerable size, fortified by well built walls.

VII. Caesar's Army

THE LEGIONS

The legions formed the strength of Caesar's army. When 32 the enemy met him in hand to hand battle the legions bore the brunt of the fighting and won him the victory. But since they consisted of heavily armed, and therefore comparatively slow, foot soldiers, and since their weapons were useless at any considerable distance, the legions needed the assistance of cavalry and light-armed infantry, to complete their success.

Organization of the Legion. In theory a legion consisted of 33 6000 men; but battles, accidents, and disease so reduced this number that Caesar's legions probably averaged about 4000 men, or even less. The following table gives the divisions of a legion and their theoretical strength:

century [centum, hundred]	= 100 men
2 centuries = 1 maniple	= 200 men
3 maniples = 1 cohort	= 600 men
10 cohorts = 1 legion	= 6000 men

In theory, again, the legions were made up of Roman citizens; but in fact a large part of Caesar's legionary soldiers came from Cisalpine Gaul, which had not yet received the right of citizenship. However, it was thoroughly Romanized, and, in spirit at least, Caesar's legionaries were Roman citizens.

EQUIPMENT OF THE LEGIONARY SOLDIER

(Plate I)

34 Clothing. a. A sleeveless woolen shirt, reaching nearly to the knees.

b. Tight-fitting leather trousers, or perhaps merely bandages wrapped about the legs.

c. Shoes or sandals.

d. A heavy cloak for bad weather. This served also as a blanket at night.

35 Armor. a. A helmet of leather (galea) or metal (cassis).

b. A leather coat (lōrīca), strengthened by bands of metal across the shoulders, breast, and back.

c. A curved wooden shield (scūtum), covered with leather, and having a metal boss in the center. It was about four feet high and two and a half feet wide.

d. Perhaps a greave on the right leg, though Caesar does not mention it. This was very much like a foot-ball shin-guard, but made of metal.

36 Arms. a. A heavy wooden javelin (pīlum, Fig. 1), with a long iron point which was strong enough to pierce any armor but was likely to bend as it did so. Therefore it could not easily be withdrawn when it had pierced a shield, and could not be thrown back by the enemy. After the battle the javelins were gathered and straightened by the Romans. Each soldier carried but one javelin.

b. A straight, heavy, two-edged sword (gladius, Fig. 2), about two feet long, adapted for either cutting or thrusting. Its scabbard (vāgīna) hung from a belt (balteus) which passed over the left shoulder. The sword was thus on the right side, out of the way of the shield. But the higher officers, who carried no shield, wore the sword on the left side.

Individual Baggage. Besides his personal belongings each 37 soldier carried his share of the picks, spades, baskets, etc., used in entrenching the camp; cooking utensils; and several days' rations of grain, which seems to have been apportioned out only twice a month. All this, weighing from thirty to forty-five pounds, was made into a pack (sarcina) and strapped on a forked stick; this the soldier carried on his shoulder. While thus encumbered the soldiers were said to be impedītī. If the army was attacked on the march the packs were stacked in one place under guard, and the soldiers were then expedītī.

OFFICERS OF THE LEGIONS

Lēgātus. All governors of provinces were given several 38 lēgātī, deputies or assistants. These legates were not strictly military officers, but were to be employed by the governors in any way they saw fit. Caesar introduced the innovation of putting a legate in command of each legion just before a battle. When one or more legions were detached from the main army for special service, Caesar put a legate in command; and legates were left in command of the winter quarters during Caesar's absence. But no one legate was in permanent command of any one legion.

Quaestor. The quaestors were financial officers, elected 39 yearly by the people at Rome. One was chosen by lot to take charge of the finances of each province, so that Caesar always had one with him. He took charge of the pay and the supplies of the army. When he was competent Caesar employed him in battle as he did his legates, putting him in command of a legion.

Praefectus Fabrum. The chief of engineers had charge of 40 such matters as the building of bridges, construction of camps, erection of siege works, repair of artillery, and the refitting of ships. He probably had special assistants, but the actual labor was performed by skilled men detailed from the ranks.

41 Tribūnus. No single officer permanently commanded a legion, as our colonels command regiments. Each legion had six tribunes, who took the chief command in rotation, while the rest probably commanded groups of cohorts or were assigned to special service. In Caesar's army many of the tribunes were experienced and capable officers, who did good service; but others were young men without military experience, who had been appointed only because they were friends or relatives of influential men at Rome whom Caesar wished to please. It was for this reason that Caesar put his legates and quaestor in command of the legions in battle. On the march or in camp a tribune was in command.

42 Centuriō. The centurions commanded centuries, and there were therefore sixty in each legion. On them fell the immediate management of the men in battle. They fought in the ranks like the men and were expected to set the men an example of conspicuous bravery. They were therefore promoted from the ranks on the basis of their strength and size as well as their skill and gallantry. They could hope for no promotion above the rank of centurion; but there were grades of centurions from one to the other of which they rose. The highest of all was the first centurion of the first cohort, the prīmipīlus. He and a few others, just how many is not known, were called centurions of the first rank (centuriōnēs prīmōrum ōrdinum, or prīmī ōrdinēs), and were commonly summoned to councils of war along with the tribunes and legates.

STANDARDS AND SIGNALS OF THE LEGIONS

43 Aquila. Each legion had as its standard a bronze or silver eagle (aquila), carried on the top of a wooden staff. It was regarded with almost religious respect, and its loss was the deepest disgrace that could befall the legion. It was in charge of the first centurion of the first cohort, and was carried by a man of conspicuous strength and bravery, the aquilifer (Plate I, 6).

Signum. Each cohort had its own standard (signum), 44 carried by a signifer (Plate I, 5). These standards were of various forms—an open hand, the figure of an animal, etc. On the staff, below the figure, were fastened the decorations of honor which had been bestowed on the cohort—disks, half moons, wreaths, and tassels. The diversity of form was necessary in order that each soldier might recognize easily the standard of his own cohort. In hasty preparation for battle each man found his place by looking for his standard; and all through the battle he regulated his movements by those of his standard. For this reason the technical terms for such maneuvers as advancing and retreating are signa īnferre, signa referre, etc.

Musical Instruments. There were no bands, and the only 45 use made of musical instruments was in the giving of signals. The only instrument mentioned by Caesar in the Gallic War is the tuba, a straight brazen trumpet, blown by a tubicen, but others were probably used as well (Plate I, 7, 8).

BAGGAGE OF THE LEGION

The heavy baggage (impedīmenta) consisted of tents, pro- 46 visions, hand-mills for grinding grain, engines of war, etc., and was carried on pack horses or mules (iūmenta). These were driven or led by the drivers (mūliōnēs) and camp servants (cālōnēs), who were probably slaves.

AUXILIARY INFANTRY AND CAVALRY

Infantry. The light armed infantry (Plate I, 1 and 2), 47 which Caesar usually calls auxilia, contained no Roman citizens. Caesar had slingers (funditōrēs) from the Balearic Islands, and archers (sagittārii) from Crete and Numidia; but most of his light armed infantry was drawn from friendly Gallic tribes and was armed in the native fashion. He put little reliance on them for serious fighting. but made them useful in various ways: as skirmishers, to delay the enemy's attack; as raiders; in making fortifications at a critical time; for mere show, to impress the enemy with his numbers; and in pursuit of a routed enemy. Their higher officers were prefects (praefectī). Their standard was a banner (vexillum, Plate I, 4) attached to a horizontal cross-piece at the end of a staff.

48 Cavalry. Caesar had no Roman cavalry. During his first six years in Gaul he had none but Gallic cavalry, but in the seventh year he secured some Germans and found them much more effective. They were useless against a line of infantry, but met the enemy's cavalry. Caesar employed them especially as scouts and raiders, or in pursuit of a routed enemy. Their higher officers were praefectī, and their standards were vexilla (cf. 47).

THE CAMP

49 A Roman army never halted even for one night without fortifying its camp (castra) with a wall and trench. This must have cost two or three hours of hard work; but it made the army safe from attack, and so allowed the general to choose his own time and place for battle; and in case of defeat the camp was a place of refuge.

50 Location and Form of Camp. Whenever it was possible the camp was built on a hill sloping gently toward the enemy, so that the Roman army could form its line of battle in front of the camp and make the enemy charge up hill. The normal shape of the camp was a square or oblong, but it had to be accommodated to the shape of the hill. Fig. 3 shows the normal shape, while Fig. 4 shows the actual shape of one of Caesar's camps. Within the camp, streets were laid out in accordance with a fixed plan, and every legion, every cohort, every maniple had always the same location. Fig. 3 shows the normal arrangement for a camp which would accommodate five legions.

Fortifications of Camp (Fig. 5). The size of the trench (fossa) varied, but was usually about nine feet wide and seven 51

deep. The earth, dug out with spades and carried in baskets, was piled up just inside the trench to make the wall (vāllum). This wall was faced partly with sods, partly with bundles of sticks (fascines), so that it was quite steep on the outside. Other fascines were put inside the wall, to strengthen it. It stood about six feet high, was wide enough on top to let the soldiers move about comfortably in fighting, and sloped so gradually toward the inside that soldiers could easily ascend it. Sometimes this slope was faced with logs, so as to make steps. On the outer

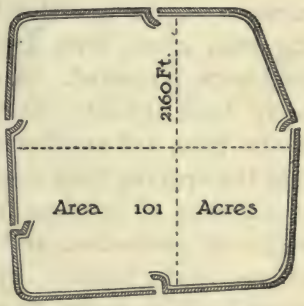

FIG. 4. CAMP ON THE AXONA

enemy would be halted by the ditch several feet from the wall, and be completely exposed to the Roman javelins, while the defenders stood on a higher position, protected by a breastwork, and could throw their missiles with great effect. In times of especial danger, towers (turrēs) were erected at intervals on top of the wall.

52 Gates of Camp. Usually there was one gate (porta) on each of the four sides; but in the camp represented in Fig. 4 there were two gates in front, where the soldiers had most occasion to pass in and out. The gates were mere openings in the wall, about forty feet wide as a rule. Fig. 4 shows how they were protected. A short curved wall projected into the camp from the left side of the gate. A line of soldiers stood in the gate, and another manned this wall. If the enemy got into the opening they would be exposed on their shieldless side to a shower of missiles from the wall. Ordinarily this was a sufficient protection, and it left the gates open for a sudden charge from within. But in times of great emergency the gates could be walled up solidly.

ROMAN OFFICERS AND GAULS

THE MARCH

Line of March. The vanguard usually consisted of cavalry 53 and light armed infantry. Under ordinary circumstances each legion was followed by a train of pack animals carrying its baggage; but in the near neighborhood of the enemy all the baggage was brought together, preceded by most of the legions and followed by the rest.

Length of March. The length of a day's march of course 54 varied greatly, according to the nature of the country and the need for haste. As the soldier had to carry from forty-five to sixty pounds of arms and baggage, and as the army had to halt early in the afternoon to give time for making camp, the rate of march of the army could be nothing like that of an unencumbered individual. Probably when there was no need of haste the average march was no more than twelve to fifteen miles, and a day of rest was given about every fifth day. But Caesar, like Napoleon, owed much of his success to his power of inspiring his army to great efforts on the march. When he speaks of forced marches (magna itinera, maxima itinera), we are to think of marches of from eighteen to twenty-five miles a day, or even more. On one occasion he marched four legions, without baggage, fifty Roman miles in less than thirty hours, including all stops.

THE BATTLE

Since the legions had to do the serious work of fighting, the 55 line of battle was arranged solely with reference to their tactics. When the enemy were within the short range of the Roman javelins they were met by a volley of these deadly missiles and their ranks were thus broken. Immediately the Romans charged, and the rest of the battle was fought out at close quarters with the sword. When possible, therefore, the line of battle was drawn up facing down a gentle slope. This gave greater range to the javelins and greater impetus to the charge; while the enemy must begin the battle breathless from a charge up the hill. The auxiliary infantry might be posted in front of the line, but it was expected to do no more than delay the attack of the enemy. More often it was posted on the flanks, sometimes merely as a show of strength. The cavalry might meet the cavalry of the enemy. Otherwise it usually merely awaited the rout of the enemy, when it pursued and cut to pieces the fugitives.

56 Line of Battle. The line of battle was commonly triple (triplex aciēs), though sometimes only double (duplex aciēs). In the triple line of battle the first line was composed of the first four cohorts of each legion, standing side by side, with no intervals between the cohorts. Three cohorts of each legion formed the second line, which stood a short distance behind the first, ready to relieve it when it became exhausted in the battle. The remaining three cohorts of each legion formed the third line, in the rear, and were held as a reserve for any emergency. Each of these lines was eight or ten men deep, and only the front rank of the first line could engage in the battle at any one moment. But that rank would fight vigorously for a few moments, then fall back and be relieved by the next rank, and so on until all the men of the first line had been engaged. Then it was relieved as a whole by the second line.

57 Orbis. When surrounded by the enemy and hard pressed, a body of men would form what is now called a hollow square, and what the Romans called a circle (orbis), with the baggage and camp servants inside the ring of armed men.

THE CAPTURE OF TOWNS

58 A great part of Caesar's military operations consisted in the capture of walled towns. The fortification of these towns was rather primitive, but it was quite effective (Fig. 6). The face of the wall showed regular rows of log ends separated by huge stones. No one log could be grappled and pulled out, for they were all fastened together far within the wall. The logs would not burn, for they were each imbedded in stone and earth. A battering-ram could demolish a solid stone wall, but the framework of timbers defied it. Therefore Caesar relied little on making breaches in the walls and entering in that way. But there were three other possible methods—a blockade, a sudden assault, and a formal siege.

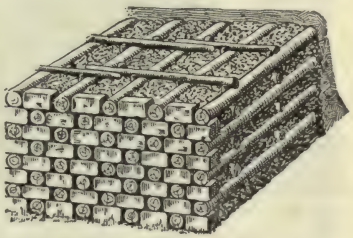

FIG. 6. SECTION OF GALLIC WALL

Blockade (obsidiō). A ring of 59 fortifications could be built around the town, and the place starved into submission. But this was too slow a method to be employed unless all other methods were hopeless, and Caesar used it only once in the Gallic War.

Sudden Assault (oppugnātiō repentīna). If a town had low 60 walls and few defenders, it might be taken by a sudden assault. Archers and slingers kept the wall partly clear of defenders. Soldiers approached the wall in safety by holding their shields over their heads and letting them overlap, forming a testūdō (tortoise, Plate III, 3). If there was a trench around the wall, they filled it with bundles of brushwood (crātēs, fascines). Then they mounted the wall by means of scaling ladders (scālae, Plate III). But such towns would usually surrender without a struggle, so that the method was little used.

Formal Siege (oppugnātiō). The favorite method was by 61 the use of the agger and tower (turris). The agger was a great causeway, built of logs and earth, which sloped gradually up toward the top of the wall. Generally it was not intended to be as high as the wall. In that case a tower, several stories high, was pushed up the causeway on rollers. From the upper stories, which rose higher than the wall, archers and slingers and artillery shot down the defenders. When the tower was near enough, a drawbridge was let down from one of the lower stories to the top of the wall, and the Romans charged across

it. Sometimes the causeway was as high as the wall, and thus itself gave access to its top (Fig. 7). Sometimes, if the wall was low and the ground about it level, no causeway was built, and the tower was pushed over the ground to the wall. Then a battering-ram might be hung in the lowest story, and the drawbridge was let down from one of the upper stories. Plate III illustrates this method of using the tower, as well as several other devices; but the city is not a Gallic town.

62 Means of Protecting the Besiegers. In building the agger and carrying on the other operations of a siege the assailants had to approach within easy range of missiles from the wall: hence they made use of several forms of protection.

a. The pluteus (Fig. 8) was a heavy shield, several feet high, mounted on wheels. A line of these, parallel to the wall, gave protection to men working immediately behind it; and it could be moved forward at pleasure.

b. The musculus (Fig. 9) was a hut with one end open and the other end partially closed. Its roof was strong enough to withstand the shock of great stones which might be dropped upon it from the wall. It could be pushed up to the wall, and under its shelter men could dig out the foundation of the wall.

c. The testūdō arietāria (Plate III, 2) was a similar hut in which hung a battering-ram (ariēs), a heavy timber capped with iron, intended to be swung against the wall.

d. The vinea (Fig. 10) was a lighter hut, open at both ends. A number of these placed end to end made a safe covered gallery extending from a point out of range up to the musculī, testūdinēs, or pluteī.

All these huts were pushed forward on rollers.

The Artillery.—Caesar had with him engines of war, the purpose of which corresponded to that of modern artillery. They were too heavy and clumsy to be of much service in battle: hence their chief use was in siege operations. The general name tormenta is derived from torqueō, to twist, and was applied to them because the propelling force was obtained by twisting a stick between two tightly stretched horse-hair ropes. 63

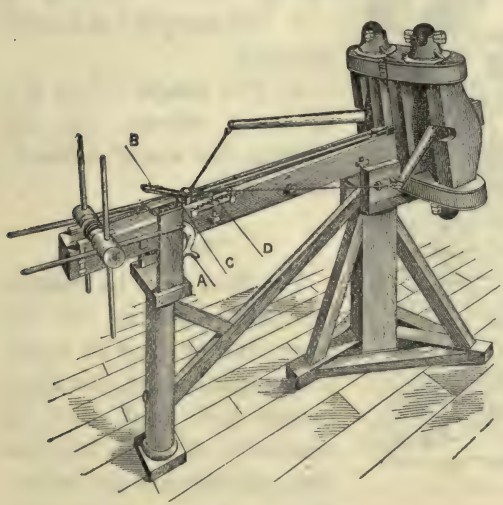

Fig. 11. Catapulta

(Plate III, 5) threw heavy stones at a considerable angle from the horizontal.

b. The catapult (catapulta) threw great arrows nearly horizontally. Fig. 11 makes most of its mechanism clear without explanation. (A) is an arrangement for raising or lowering the rear of the nearly horizontal track, thus regulating the range. The track is grooved to hold a long sliding carriage, on the rear portion of which is the trigger (B). The operation of firing was as follows: The carriage was pushed forward till the claws of the trigger were over the bowstring; a block (C) was shoved under the heavy rear end of the trigger, and the claws were thus held down on the string; the carriage was drawn back by means of the windlass, and held in place by the hook (D); the arrow was laid on the grooved upper surface of the carriage, with its end resting on the string between the claws of the trigger, the block (C) was withdrawn and the rear end of the trigger fell by its own weight, thus releasing the string.

c. The scorpiō was a small catapult.

d. The onager (Plate III, 4) threw stones, like the ballista, but was of different construction.

THE FLEET

The fleet is to be considered as belonging to the army, rather than as a separate organization; for when Caesar had need of it he manned it with his legionaries, put tribunes and centurions in command of individual ships, and made one of his legates its admiral. The ships of war were about eight times as long as they were broad, and were therefore called nāvēs longae, in distinction from the transports (nāvēs onerāriae), which were shorter and wider. They had a mast and single sail, but in battle depended on oars for their propulsion. Their prows (Fig. 12) were armed with metal beaks (rōstra), with which to ram the ships of the enemy. If the Romans failed in this they sought to make the battle as much as possible like a battle on land, their special object being to grapple one of the enemy's ships and board it.

A BRIEF BIBLIOGRAPHY

The following list of books will suggest those which are most helpful to pupils and teachers who read only English. Those who wish to make a more detailed study of special points will find that Holmes gives references to almost everything of importance in the enormous literature of Caesar, except on the linguistic side.

BOOK I, CHAPTERS 1 TO 29. WAR WITH THE HELVETII

The Helvetii were a Gallic people living in northern Switzerland. Hemmed in by the mountains, they had retained without loss their strength and independence. During the invasion of Gaul by the Cimbri a part of the Helvetii had left their country independently and defeated a Roman army in 107 B.C. Many of the Helvetii had joined the Cimbri and Teutoni in their attempted invasion of Italy in 102 and 101 B.C. After the disastrous result of these attempts the Helvetii had remained comparatively quiet for a long time; but now, dissatisfied with the narrow limits of their country, they determined to seek wider fields

The originator of this plan was Orgetorix, their most powerful nobleman. But the Helvetii soon learned that he was trying to further ambitious plans of his own and to use them as tools; that he intended to make himself their king, and then to unite with two neighboring states in the subjugation of all Gaul. The penalty for the crime of aiming at royal power was death, but Orgetorix anticipated the punishment by committing suicide. Yet the Helvetii persisted in the plans which they had adopted at his suggestion. They made all preparations, then burned their homes and gathered near the western end of Lake Geneva, ready to set out.

But Rome had been watching their preparations in some alarm. If the Helvetii marched through the province, they could not fail to give trouble to the Romans. And what was a more serious matter, if the Helvetii left their country vacant it would be occupied by the Germans; and the Germans were dangerous neighbors. Caesar's term of office as governor of Gaul began in the year of their departure. Learning that the Helvetii intended to set out sooner than he had expected, he hurried to Geneva, so that when they gathered he was there to meet them. He destroyed the bridge across the Rhone, which they had failed to secure, and with his one legion hastily made and manned a line of defenses on the south bank of the river. He then forbade their crossing, and easily checked their attempts to disobey his orders.

The baffled Helvetii now obtained permission of the Sequani to pass to the west through their territory. The great host, with its women and children and thousands of wagons, marched slowly through this to the Saone, and its van crossed the river and began plundering the land of the Haedui. Meanwhile Caesar had hastened back to northern Italy and returned with five legions. The Haedui, who had been nominal allies of the Romans for many years, now appealed to Caesar. He was not sorry to appear as the champion of Gallic freedom, for he thus gained a footing in Gaul. Finding that one of the four divisions of the Helvetii had not yet crossed the Saone, he fell upon it and cut it to pieces. Immediately he crossed the river in pursuit of the main body. For fifteen days he followed it, but on account of the nature of the country he was unable to head off the slowly moving mass. Finally the lack of provisions compelled him to turn aside to Bibracte. Believing that this action was due to cowardice, the Helvetii in turn became the pursuers, thus allowing Caesar to meet them on ground of his own choosing. In a hard fought battle he defeated them with immense loss; and the remnant of the once proud and mighty people sadly returned to its mountain home.

EXPLANATION OF CAMPAIGN MAP

Brown indicates the part of Transalpine Gaul which belonged to Rome when Caesar entered upon his command.

Red indicates the states whose submission Caesar secured by conquering them in battle. The Boii are shown in the homes given them after their defeat. The Latobrigi and the Tulingi lived across the Rhine and are not shown on this map. The Ceutrones, the Graioceli, and the Caturiges were forced to permit the passage of the army, but were probably not reduced to submission, and are therefore left uncolored.

Blue indicates the states which submitted without fighting. In chap. 30 we are told that envoys from "nearly all Gaul" came to Caesar as a result of his victory over the Helvetii. It is certain that Celtic Gaul is meant; therefore Aquitania and Belgium are left uncolored. In chap. 31 we are told that Ariovistus held a part of the territory of the Sequani; this is left uncolored. In II, 34 we are given a list of states which did not submit till 57; these also are left uncolored. All the rest of Celtic Gaul may be supposed to have submitted at the close of the war with the Helvetii; it is therefore colored blue.

The line of march shows Caesar's route in crossing the Alps the second time, with the five legions. It also shows the route of the Helvetii after they left their territory. After crossing the Arar Caesar's route coincides with that of the Helvetii.

Crossed sabers indicate battlefields. Colonel Stoffel's identification of the main battlefield (Histoire de Jules César: Guerre Civile, II, 439–453) is almost certainly right and is indicated on this map.

11. quā dē causā, "(and) for this reason." The relative is often used to connect independent sentences in Latin, but is not so used in English. suīs therefore refers to the Helvetii. For case see App. 134: G.-L. 390, 2: A. 400; 401: B. 214, 2: H.-B. 408, 2: H. 464, 1; and notice that the preposition ab is often used in the same sense, as in ab Aquītānīs, l. 4.

eōrum refers to the Germans. For case see App. 99: G.-L. 362: A. 343: B. 198: H.-B. 339: H. 440, 1.

The whole may be freely translated, "which, as has been said, the Gauls occupy."

15. ā flūmine, "at the river." There are many phrases in which we feel "at" or "on" to be the appropriate preposition, but in which the Romans seem to have thought of a starting-point and consequently used ab or ex, which literally mean "from."

16. ab Sēquanīs, "in the direction of" or "on the side of." Cf. the preceding note.

exeō, -īre, -iī, -itum, intr. [eō, go. App. 84], go from or out, depart from, leave. 2.

5. perfacilis, -e, adj. [facilis, easy], very easy. 2.

3. coniūrātiōnem: the real purpose of the conspiracy was to make Orgetorix king, although the Helvetii, like most Gallic peoples, had no king. See Int. 29. His real reasons for wishing the people to emigrate were (1) that by making himself leader of the emigration he could get power enough to make himself king; and (2) that as king he wished to conquer the other states of Gaul.

cīvitātī: case? App. 115: G.-L. 346: A. 367: B. 187, II, a: H.-B. 362, footnote 3, (b): H. 426, 2. The list of verbs given in this rule should be committed to memory.

5. perfacile esse . . . potīrī is indirect discourse, depending on a verb of saying implied in persuāsit. Indirect discourse (App. 265) is very common in Caesar, and for this reason its essential principles should be grasped as soon as possible. No reference to details of the construction will be given in I, 1-29. The most essential fact to grasp is that when a declarative sentence is turned into indirect discourse the verb of the principal clause becomes an infinitive: App. 266: G.-L. 648; 650: A. 580, a: B. 314, 1, 2: H.-B. 589: H. 642, 1. This infinitive, however, cannot properly be translated by an English infinitive. In the present instance, what Orgetorix said was, perfacile est . . . potīrī, "it is very easy to get control." The est has become esse, but the English equivalent is "(saying) that it was very easy to get control."

cum . . . praestārent, "since they excelled all in valor." virtūte: case? App. 149: G.-L. 397: A. 418: B. 226: H.-B. 441: H. 480. omnibus: case? Later in his work Caesar implies that the pressure of the Germans was one of the reasons for the emigration of the Helvetii. On the other hand, the certainty that Germans would occupy Helvetia was one of the reasons why Caesar would not let the Helvetii emigrate. See Int. 3.

Caesar has somewhat overstated the size of Helvetia, because he had to depend on the reports of the Gauls. It comprised rather more than half of modern Switzerland. According to chap. 29 the population was 263,000, while Switzerland now has a population of about 3,000,000.

The second important fact about indirect discourse (cf. 2, 5) is that all subordinate verbs which in the direct form were either indicatives or subjunctives must be subjunctives in the indirect form: App. 269: G.-L. 650: A. 580: B. 314, 1: H.-B. 534, 2, I; 535, 2: H. 643.

13. occīsum, pulsum, missum are perfect passive infinitives in indirect discourse, and depend on memoriā tenēbat, which is equivalent to a verb of knowing. The perfect infinitive represents the action as past at the time of tenēbat; "that Lucius Cassius had been slain," etc.

14. sub iugum, "under the yoke." This "yoke" was made of three spears, two planted in the ground and the third fastened across them at a suitable height. Under this the soldiers of the captured army were compelled to pass, in token of submission and degradation.

concēdendum (esse), "that permission ought to be granted."

15. hominēs temperātūrōs (esse), "that men would refrain." The future infinitive shows that a future indicative was used in the direct form. Caesar thought nōn temperābunt, "they will not refrain."

20. reverterentur, "they should come again." This is a principal clause in indirect discourse, but the subjunctive is used instead of the infinitive because an imperative was used in the direct form. Caesar said sī quid vultis, revertiminī, "if you want anything, come again." The third (cf. 2, 5 and 3, 17) important fact about indirect discourse is that all imperatives of the direct form become subjunctives in the indirect form: App. 267: G.-L. 652: A. 588: B. 316: H.-B. 534, 2; 538: H. 642.

mīlia passuum XIX = about 17½ English miles. This is the distance from the lake to Pas de l'Écluse, following the windings of the river. Caesar's plain statement is that he constructed a wall and a trench nineteen miles in length. Napoleon III believed that the banks of the river were so steep for most of the distance that no artificial fortifications were needed, and the map on p. 70 shows the only places where he believed that Caesar constructed the wall and trench—a total of about three miles. Napoleon's view is generally accepted, but there are good grounds for doubting its correctness.

in altitūdinem pedum sēdecim, lit. "of sixteen feet into height" = "sixteen feet high." pedum: App. 100: G.-L. 365, 2: A. 345, b: B. 203, 2: H.-B. 355: H. 440, 3. The "section of Caesar's wall," set into the map, p. 70, makes clear the method of constructing this wall. The top of the bank was cut down so as to make a steep front sixteen feet high: this was the mūrus. The earth which was dug out was simply thrown down the hill. A line of palisades was set on top, to serve as a breastwork for the Roman soldiers.

6. dispōnit, "stationed at several points." Caesar had too few men to man the entire line. He therefore sta-

2. facere is the subject of esse.

3. nōn longē: the distance is really about 130 miles, but the Helvetii would be more dangerous in the territory of the Santones than in their own country, because they would no longer be hemmed in by natural barriers. Caesar had reason to fear that either the Helvetii or the Gauls whom they should drive from their homes would raid the Province; and since it was his duty to protect the Province he was justified in forcing the Helvetii to remain at home. He does not choose to add, however, that this movement of the Helvetii gave him an excellent opportunity to interfere in the affairs of Gaul, and thereby fitted in with his plans for the conquest of the country.

7. The rest of this chapter and the whole of the next are in indirect discourse. If the teacher wishes the class, at this point, to make a more detailed study of the construction than is called for by the notes, he will find help in the direct form of these speeches as printed after Book VII.

Remember the important facts already learned,—that in every declarative sentence the principal verb will be an infinitive, and that in every subordinate clause the verb will be a subjunctive. Usually the future infinitive shows that the speaker used a future indicative, a present infinitive shows that he used a present indicative, and a perfect infinitive shows that he used a past tense of the indicative. But note that not every infinitive stands for an indicative in the direct form; for all infinitives in the direct form are retained unchanged in the indirect. Note that every subjunctive follows the rule of sequence of tenses: App. 202; 203: G.-L. 509; 510; 511: A. 482, 1, 2; 483: B. 266, B; 267, 1, 2, 3: H.-B. 476, foot-note 2: H. 198; 543; 544; 545.

sī . . . faceret. "if . . . should make." Only the sense of the passage shows that faceret stands for an original future rather than a present, and for an indicative rather than a subjunctive.

9. Helvētiōs is the subject of itūrōs and futūrōs.

eōs is the subject of esse.

ubi cōnstituisset, "where he should have decided"="where he should decide" or "where he decided." The pluperfect can stand equally well for the perfect, the pluperfect, or the future perfect; but the Helvetii do not promise to return to their own country, and Caesar had not yet decided to settle them anywhere else; therefore cōnstituisset must stand for a future perfect, a tense rarely used in English.

10. persevērāret stands for a future, like faceret, l. 8.

reminīscerētur, "he should remember." Since this is a principal clause the use of the subjunctive shows that the sentence is not declarative. App. 267: G.-L. 652: A. 588: B. 316: H.-B. 534, 2; 538: H. 642.

11. et . . . et, "both . . . and."

incommodī: i.e. the defeat of Cassius: case? App. 107: G.-L. 376: A.

14. doleant: so far the subjunctive tenses have all been imperfects and pluperfects, because the indirect discourse depends on the past verb respondit. But it is quite common for the writer of indirect discourse to use the tenses that were used in the direct form instead of following the rule of sequence of tenses. Thus presents and perfects are used to the end of the chapter. This usage, called repraesentatio, is due to the same desire for vividness which leads to the use of the historical present for a past tense. It is usually better to translate as if the regular past tenses were used, just as it is better to translate the historical present indicative by a past.

1. castra movent, "march on." The map facing p. 42 shows the route followed by the Helvetii. They could not march due west toward the Santones because the country is too mountainous. They therefore marched north, then northwest, intending to reach the Liger (Loire) and march down its valley.

His army was outnumbered by an enemy whom the Romans had long dreaded. Defeat meant the total destruction of his army. Nothing was lost by postponing the battle. Therefore he wisely decided to wait until he could choose his own time and place.

It was tactful of Caesar to make Diviciacus believe that Dumnorix was spared for his sake. In reality, however, Caesar had his hands full with the Helvetii and could not afford to stir up a revolt of the Haedui in addition—a result which might easily have followed an attempt to punish their most popular noble. A few years later Caesar put Dumnorix to death for obstinate disobedience. See V, 7.

If the phalanx remained unbroken, it could break the opposing line by sheer weight; but if it broke, the men were too closely packed to use their weapons effectively.

Haeduīs: indirect object of concessit.

14. ēgregiā virtūte, "(men) of very great courage": a descriptive ablative.

ut collocārent is the object of concessit. The Boii had had no fixed home, as is shown by 5, 11, 12. The map facing p. 42 shows where they were settled by the Haedui. The Haedui wished to strengthen their frontier against invasions by neighboring states, just as Rome wished the Helvetii to guard her frontier against the Germans.

BOOK I, CHAPTERS 30 TO 54. WAR WITH ARIOVISTUS

The complete success of Caesar's campaign against the Helvetii at once established his prestige in Gaul. Representatives from most of the states came to beg his aid against their common enemy, Ariovistus, a German king who had established himself in Gaul. It was still early in July, and there was time for another campaign that summer. Caesar willingly accepted the task, for if ever he was to become master of Gaul he must first put out of his way this rival conqueror; and in any case it was most important that the Germans should be kept to the east of the Rhine. Yet the Germans were no mean antagonists, and Caesar was ready to make some concessions rather than fight them. He first proposed to Ariovistus that they settle their differences in friendly conference, but he met a haughty refusal. Determined to bring the king to terms before he should be joined by other German tribes, Caesar marched against him with all speed.

During a few days' halt at Vesontio the soldiers heard such fearful tales of the Germans that they were on the point of mutiny. By a masterly speech Caesar quieted their fears and aroused their enthusiasm to the highest pitch; and at once he led them on toward the enemy. Never again during the Gallic campaigns did his soldiers give him trouble.

Impressed by Caesar's activity, Ariovistus in his turn now proposed a conference; but when they met he replied boastfully to Caesar's demands, and the interview was broken off by an attack of the German guard. Caesar refused to meet Ariovistus a second time, but sent two representatives in his place. These Ariovistus threw into chains. The negotiations were thus finally broken off.

At once Ariovistus marched past Caesar's camp, keeping up on the slopes of a mountain where he was safe from attack, and boldly established his camp in such a way as to command the road by which Caesar had come, and by which his provisions were to follow. Caesar immediately offered battle, but the Germans were not ready to fight. Five days later Caesar marched back past the German camp and fortified and garrisoned a small camp to protect the way for his provisions. The Germans were unsuccessful in an assault on this small camp.

At last Caesar determined to force a battle, and he marched straight at the German camp. As this was not fortified, Ariovistus was obliged to lead out his army and draw it up against the Romans. Caesar in person led his right wing, which was successful; his left, on the contrary, was beaten back. The reserves, hurrying to this spot, decided the contest. The Germans broke and fled to the river Ill, a branch of the Rhine, so closely pursued that only a few, including, however, the king, escaped to the other bank.

In the two campaigns of this one year important results were achieved. The Rhine for the first time became the frontier of the Roman possessions; the tide of barbarian invasion was rolled back for five hundred years; the destiny of Gaul as a future dependency of Rome was fixed; and the Roman's traditional fear of the Gauls and the Germans was dispelled.

EXPLANATION OF CAMPAIGN MAP

Brown indicates Roman possessions when Caesar entered Gaul. Red indicates states which Caesar conquered. Blue indicates the states which submitted without fighting. Compare all these with the map facing page 42.

Crossed sabers indicate the battlefield. Colonel Stoffel's identification of it (Guerre de César et d'Arioviste) is very probable, and is indicated on this map.

Chap. 30-36. At the request of the Gallic states Caesar warns Ariovistus to cease encroaching on Gallic territory, but he receives a defiant reply. Chap. 30. Deputations from the Gallic states congratulate Caesar and ask permission to hold a council.

1. tōtīus ferē Galliae: Gallia Celtica is meant. The blue color on the map facing p. 42 shows the part of Gaul from which envoys may have come; but probably not all the states so colored were represented at this time.

2. grātulātum: construction? App. 295: G.-L. 435: A. 509: B. 340, 1, b: H.-B. 618: H. 632; 633, 1.

3. Since there is a large amount of indirect discourse in 30-54, it is necessary to make a more detailed study of the construction than has been called for by the notes on 1-29. It is assumed that the following points are clearly understood by the student: the accusative and infinitive in principal declarative clauses; the subjunctive in principal imperative clauses; the subjunctive in subordinate clauses. The direct form of all long passages of indirect discourse is given after Book VII.

sēsē: the envoys said "we." The reflexive pronoun suī or the corresponding possessive suus is regularly used in indirect discourse wherever a pronoun of the first person is changed to one of the third. In this use the reflexive is often called the indirect reflexive, in contrast with the direct reflexive, which refers to the subject of the clause in which it stands. App. 165: G.-L. 520; 521: A. 300, 2: B. 244, 1, II: H.-B. 262, 2: H. 504.

Helvētiōrum . . . Rōmānī, "the wrongs inflicted by the Helvetii upon the Roman people," refers to the defeat of Cassius, 12, 13. Since the phrase implies "the Helvetii wronged the Roman people," Helvētiōrum is a subjective genitive, populī Rōmānī an objective genitive: App. 98: G.-L. 363, 1, 2: A. 348, n.: B. 199; 200: H.-B. 344: 351: H. 440. 1. 2.

6. flōrēns, -entis, adj. [flōreō, flower], flourishing, prosperous, influential. 2.

8. domicilium, -lī, n. [domus, house], residence, dwelling, home, domicile. 3.

9. opportūnus, -a, -um, adj., fit, opportune, lucky, suitable; favorable, advantageous. ∗ frūctuōsus, -a, -um, adj. [frūctus, fruit], fruitful, productive. 1.

10. stīpendiārius, -a, -um, adj. [stīpendium, tribute], paying tribute, tributary; pl. as noun, tributaries. 2.

12. indīcō, -dīcere, -dīxī, -dictum, tr. [dīcō, say], say publicly, proclaim, appoint, call. 1.

13. quīdam, quaedam, quiddam and quīdam, quaedam, quoddam; indef. pron. (App. 62 and b), a certain one, some one; a certain, some, a; a kind of. ∗ commūnis, -e, adj., common, general; rēs commūnis, the common interest. ∗

cōnsēnsus, -ūs, m. [cōnsentiō, agree], united opinion, agreement, consent; coalition. 3.

14. permittō, -mittere, -mīsī, -missum, tr. [mittō, send], give up or over, surrender; entrust, commit; permit, allow. ∗

6. flōrentissimīs rēbus, "although they were in a very prosperous condition." The ablative absolute is here equivalent to an adversative clause.

suās: this is a direct reflexive, since it refers to Helvētiī, the subject of the clause in which it stands: App. 164: G.-L. 309, 1: A. 300, 1: B. 244, 1, I: H.-B. 262, 1: H. 504.

7. utī īnferrent, potīrentur, dēligerent, habērent: substantive volitive (or purpose) clauses, in apposition with eō cōnsiliō.

8. domiciliō: dative of purpose.

10. iūdicāssent, "they should decide," lit. "they should have decided."

11. petiērunt utī sibi licēret, "they requested permission."

concilium: The envoys mentioned in l.1 did not constitute this council. They issued a call for representatives from each state. The blue color on the map facing p. 117 indicates the part of Gaul from which envoys probably came to the council.

12. Caesaris voluntāte: "with Caesar's consent." They did not wish Caesar to suspect that the council was for the purpose of making war on him. The request shows that they were impressed by Caesar's power, and may fairly be regarded as the first step in their submission to him.

5. labōrō, 1, intr. [labor, toil], toil, work hard; be anxious, troubled, or perplexed; labor, suffer, be hard pressed. 3.

7. cruciātus, -ūs, m. [crucīō, torture; crux, cross], torture, torment. *

9. factiō, -ōnis, f. [faciō, make], party, faction. 1.

nisi (īīs) quibus mandātum esset, "except to those to whom they should be directed" (to disclose it). mandātum esset is impersonal. The pluperfect subjunctive stands for a future perfect indicative by implied indirect discourse, for the agreement was in effect "we will tell no one except those whom we shall have agreed upon."

Chap. 31. They implore him to aid them against the German king Ariovistus.

1. eō conciliō dīmissō: Caesar leaves it to be inferred from the fact that his permission was given (30, 14) that the council was held.

īdem prīncipēs: when they had come to Caesar before (30, 2) they had had no authority to act for their states. Now the council had authorized them to ask for Caesar's help.

3. dē . . . salūte, "for their own safety and (that) of all."

agere, "to confer."

4. Caesarī ad pedēs, "at Caesar's feet." But Caesarī does not depend on pedēs, nor is it a dative of possessor: App. 120: G.-L. 350, 1: A. 377: B. 188, 1, n.: H.-B. 368: H. 425, 4, n.

5. nōn minus, etc., "(saying) that they were no l ss urgent and anxious that . . . should not be reported, than that, etc."

quae dīxissent, "which they should say."

7. sī ēnūntiātum esset, "if reports should get out." The verb is used impersonally. All the conditional clauses in this chapter employed the indicative in the direct form. ēnūntiātum esset stands for a future perfect and is a vivid future condition: App. 256: G.-L. 595: A. 516, a, c: B, 302, 1: H.-B. 579, a: H. 574, 1.

8. Galliae: Gallia Celtica is meant.

9. factiōnēs: see Int. 29.

10. cum contenderent, "when they had fought." We might expect the pluperfect, but the imperfect is used on the principle laid down for the imperfect indicative in App. 191, b: G.-L. 234: A. 471, b: B. 260, 4: H.-B. 485: H. 535, 1.

11. factum esse utī, "it had come to pass that." So far in this chapter all the subjunctives have been imperfects and pluperfects, in accordance with the rule for sequence of tenses; for the indirect discourse depends on an historical tense, locutus est, l. 8. But in potuerit we have an instance of repraesentatio; i.e. the tense of the direct form is retained in the indirect: App. 270, a: G.-L. 654, n.: A. 585, b, n.: B. 318: H. 644, 1.

29. postulātum: the supine. His request for assistance was made three years before this time, and was unsuccessful. Cicero met him in Rome and speaks of him with admiration.

30. peius accidisse, "a worse fate had befallen."

32. tertiam partem: this was probably an exaggeration. The part taken by Ariovistus corresponds pretty well with upper Alsace, on the Rhine, and is colored red on the map facing p. 117.

33. alterā, "a second."

34. paucīs mēnsibus ante, lit. "before by a few months" = "a few months before." mēnsibus is an ablative of degree of difference.

mēnsibus ante Harūdum mīlia hominum XXIV ad eum vēnissent, quibus locus ac sēdēs parārentur. Futūrum esse paucīs annīs utī omnēs ex Galliae fīnibus pellerentur atque omnēs Germānī Rhēnum trānsīrent; neque enim cōnferendum esse Gallicum cum Germānōrum agrō, neque hanc cōnsuētūdinem victūs cum illā comparandam. Ariovistum autem, ut semel Gallōrum cōpiās proeliō vīcerit, quod proelium factum sit ad Magetobrigam, superbē et crūdēliter imperāre, obsidēs nōbilissimī cuiusque līberōs poscere et in eōs omnia exempla cruciātūsque ēdere, sī quā rēs nōn ad nūtum aut ad voluntātem eius facta sit. Hominem esse barbarum, īrācundum, temerārium; nōn posse eius imperia diūtius sustinērī. Nisi quid in Caesare

36. futūrum esse utī omnēs pellerentur, lit. "it would be that all would be expelled"="all would be expelled." The direct form was omnēs pellentur. As the future indicative must be rendered by the future infinitive, one might expect pulsum īrī; but this form of the future passive infinitive is very rare and the periphrasis found in the text is the usual method of expressing the future passive infinitive: App. 205, b: G.-L. 531: A. 569, 3, a: B. 270, 3, a: H.-B. 472, c: H. 619, 2.

41. vīcerit: from this point on to the end of the chapter repraesentatio is employed. See note on potuerit, l. 26.

proelium: this final and decisive battle was fought two years before Caesar came to Gaul. It is probable that the Sequani had joined forces with the Haedui in an effort to expel Ariovistus.

43. cuiusque: the singular forms of quisque, "each," with superlatives have the force of "every" or "all."

Cum ab hīs saepius quaereret neque ūllam omnīnō vōcem exprimere posset, īdem Dīviciācus Haeduus respondit: Hōc esse miseriōrem et graviōrem fortūnam Sēquanōrum quam reliquōrum, quod sōlī nē in occultō quidem querī neque auxilium implōrāre audērent / absentisque Ariovistī crūdēlitātem, velut sī cōram adesset, horrērent, proptereā quod reliquīs tamen fugae facultās darētur, Sēquanīs vērō, quī intrā fīnēs suōs Ariovistum recēpissent, quōrum oppida omnia in potestāte eius essent, omnēs cruciātūs essent perferendī.

3. beneficiō suō: in Caesar's consulship, only the year before, the senate had conferred upon Ariovistus the titles "rēx" and "amīcus." This had been done to keep Ariovistus from interfering with Roman interests in Gaul until Caesar should be ready to take charge of his province.

Ariovistum fīnem iniūriīs factūrum. Hāc ōrātiōne habitā concilium dīmīsit. frātrēs appellātōs, "who had been called brothers." See note on 11, 5.

10. quod, "and this"; i.e. the condition of the Haedui, as set forth in the preceding infinitive clauses.

11. sibi refers to Caesar, the subject of arbitrābātur, not to the subject of the clause in which it stands; it is therefore the indirect reflexive: App. 165: G.-L. 520; 521: A. 300, 2: B. 244, 1, II: H.-B. 262, 2: H. 504.

paulātim, etc., "he saw that for the Germans to get gradually in the habit of crossing and . . . to come . . . (was) dangerous," etc.

13. perīculōsum: see Int. 3.

14. sibi: indirect object of temperātūrōs. It refers to hominēs, the subject of the clause in which it stands; it is therefore the direct reflexive: App. 164: G.-L. 309, 1: A. 300, 1: B. 244, 1, I: H.-B. 262, 1: H. 504.

18. Rhodanus dīvideret, "only the Rhone separates." Caesar's statement of the reasons for espousing the cause of the Gauls is candid and convincing. No doubt the enterprise fell in with his bold and ambitious spirit; but it appealed also to the statesman and lover of his country. Gaul must certainly yield to the barbarism of the German or the civilization of the Roman. No half-way ground was possible.

quibus rēbus occurrendum, "that he must face this danger." Since occurrō is an intransitive verb it cannot be used in the passive except impersonally: App. 115, d: G.-L. 346, R. 1: A. 372: B. 187, II, b: H.-B. 364, 2: H. 426, 3.

Chap. 34. Ariovistus haughtily rejects Caesar's proposal to confer with him.

1. ad Ariovistum: he was somewhere in the country he had taken from the Sequani. Cf. note on 31, 32.

3. colloquiō: dative of purpose.

velle sēsē agere, "(saying) that he wished to confer." Caesar was anxious to secure his end without a war and probably thought that the diplomatic relations which had been maintained with Ariovistus could be kept up (cf. note on 33, 3).

4. summīs . . . rēbus, "matters of the greatest importance to both."

5. sī esset, sēsē ventūrum fuisse: the direct form was sī esset, vēnissem, "if I wanted anything, I should have gone," a contrary to fact condition: App. 254: G.-L. 597, R. 1: A. 517, a: B. 304, 1, 2: H.-B. 581: H. 579, 1. When such a condition is turned into indirect discourse, the conclusion always takes the infinitive form -ūrus fuisse, although some of the grammars make the mistake of saying that the imperfect subjunctive becomes -ūrus esse: App. 272, II: G.-L. 597, R, 4: A.

ventūrum fuisse; sī quid ille sē velit, illum ad sē venīre oportēre. ipsī: case? App. 117: G.-L. 349: A. 373: B. 190: H.-B. 374: H. 430. The indirect reflexive, sibi, would be more usual, but ipsī is more emphatic.

6. sī . . velit, "if Caesar wanted anything of him," lit. "if Caesar wanted him (for) anything." Volō sometimes, as here, governs two accusatives, like verbs of asking or demanding: App. 125, b: G.-L. 341, n. 2: A. 390, d: H.-B. 397, 1: H. 412. sī velit stands for an original sī vult: App. 253: G.-L. 595: A. 515: B. 302, 1: H.-B. 579: H. 574, 1.

8. quās . . . possidēret: i.e. the land of the Haedui and the Lingones, which Ariovistus assumes that Caesar has conquered.

10. mīrum: predicate adjective with vidērī; "it seemed strange."

quid Caesarī negōtī esset, lit. "what of business there was to Caesar" ="what business Caesar had"; an indirect question, subject of vidērī. Caesarī is a dative of possessor.

omnīnō, "in general."

Chap. 35. Caesar demands that Ariovistus cease his oppression of the Gauls.

3. beneficiō affectus: cf. note on 33, 3. The German was shrewd enough to estimate the beneficium at its true value.

ferret, ut, "since he made this requital, that." The direct form given after Book VII represents Caesar's words to his envoys, in which Ariovistus was spoken of in the third person. It would also be possible to give the form in which the message was to be repeated to Ariovistus, in which he would be addressed in the second person. In the latter case referret stands for refers, "you make."

6. neque dīcendum . . . putāret, "and did not think it necessary to discuss and learn." sibi: case? App. 118: G.-L. 355: A. 374: B. 189, 1: H.-B. 373, 1: H. 431.

7. haec esse quae, "these were (the things) which."

nē trādūceret: as addressed to the envoys the direct form was nē trādūcat, "that he shall not bring," a substantive volitive clause, in apposition with haec. As addressed to Ariovistus it would be nōlī trādūcere, "do not bring," a prohibition: App. 219: G.-L. 271, 2: A. 450: B. 276, c: H.-B. 501, 3, a, 2: H. 561, 1.

12. fēcisset stands for a future perfect indicative: App. 256: G.-L. 595: A. 516, a, c: B. 302, 1: H.-B. 579, a: H. 574, 1.

15. senātus cēnsuisset: this decree of the senate was the only result of the entreaties of Diviciacus (cf. 31, 28), and no governor had paid any attention to it, as Ariovistus very well knew.

16. quod . . . posset, "so far as he could do it in accordance with the interests of the state"; a common formula in decrees of the senate.

Chap. 36. Ariovistus responds defiantly.

1. ut imperārent: a substantive volitive clause, in apposition with iūs.

vīcissent, vīcissent, vellent might all have been indicative in the direct form, but would probably be attracted into the subjunctive.

3. ad alterius praescrīptum, "in accordance with the dictates of anyone else."

4. ipse: direct form, ego. The reflexive cannot be used to replace a pronoun of the first person (cf. note on sēsē, 30, 3) when a nominative is required, because it has no nominative. Usually no pronoun is used; but if there is emphasis, as here, ipse is used.

5. quem . . . ūterētur, "how they should exercise their rights."

6. nōn oportēre sē impedīrī, "he [Ariovistus] ought not to be hampered."

7. sibi: dative with the adjective stīpendiāriōs.

9. quī faceret may be translated by a causal clause, "since he, etc.," but the indicative was probably used in the direct form. Apparently the presence of Caesar had given hope to the Haedui and had made them less careful in paying their tribute to Ariovistus.

neque . . . neque, "but . . . not . . . or."

11. illātūrum, sī manērent: a vivid future condition.

12. in . . . convēnisset, lit. "should remain in that which had been agreed upon" = "adhered to the terms which had been agreed upon."

13 fēcissent stands for a future perfect indicative.

longē . . . āfutūrum, "the name of brothers of the Roman people would be of little value to them."

Chap. 37-41. Caesar marches into the country of Ariovistus, checking a panic on the way.

Chap. 37. Because of this reply and further complaints of the Gauls, Caesar marches toward Ariovistus.

1. eōdem tempore: the reply of Ariovistus and the complaints of the Gauls reached Caesar at the same time. It was now about the beginning of August.

et lēgātī ab Haeduīs et ā Trēverīs veniēbant: Haeduī questum quod Harūdēs, quī nūper in Galliam trānsportātī essent, fīnēs eōrum populārentur: Sēsē nē obsidibus quidem datīs pācem Ariovistī redimere potuisse; Trēverī autem, pāgōs centum Suēbōrum ad rīpās Rhēnī cōnsēdisse, quī Rhēnum trānsīre cōnārentur; hīs praeesse Nasuam et Cimberium frātrēs. obsidibus datīs, "by giving hostages."

5. Trēverī: sc. veniēbant questum, followed by indirect discourse.

6. trānsīre: somewhere north of where Ariovistus was, probably near modern Mayence. The Treveri were a strong people, and it is probable that Ariovistus was marching north to help the Suebi cross when he was interrupted by the news of Caesar's approach.

9. sī coniūnxisset: implied indirect discourse for the future perfect indicative.

10. minus . . . posset, lit. "it could be less easily resisted (to them)."

11. magnīs itineribus: cf. Int. 54. Caesar intended to strike Ariovistus before he could effect a junction with the Suebi. He started from the country of the Lingones, where he had received the surrender of the Helvetii and where his army had been encamped near Tonnerre pending the result of his negotiations with Ariovistus. Chap. 40. Caesar encourages his officers.

1. omnium ōrdinum: to the ordinary council of war only the centurions of the first rank were admitted (Int. 42). This, however, was a special gathering of all the officers to listen to Caesar's speech.

3. incūsāvit: this implies a verb of saying, and what follows is in indirect discourse. The tactful and self-reliant combination of rebuke and encouragement makes the speech very effective. Military discipline demands severe punishment for mutiny, but this speech prevented open mutiny and served Caesar's purpose better than punishment. There was never again any sign of mutiny in the Gallic war.

5. cōnstitērunt: distinguish carefully between cōnsistō and cōnstituō.

6. ex equīs, "on horseback." Cf. l. 4: in that line the horses are the means by which the soldiers are brought to the hill; in this they are the places from which the conversation goes on.

9. quod amīcus: sc. appellātus esset. Cf. note on 33, 3.

10. missa: sc. essent. The three quod clauses are substantive clauses in apposition with beneficia, and the subjunctive is due to implied indirect discourse.

12. aditum: i.e. to the senate.

14. ipsīs . . . intercēderent, "existed between them [the Romans] and the Haedui." intercēderent: subjunctive in an indirect question.

16. in eōs, "in their behalf."

ut, "how," introducing an indirect question.

17. Galliae: i.e. Celtic Gaul; but we have learned in 31, 8 that even there their supremacy had always been disputed.

prius . . . quam = priusquam. The subjunctive which it introduces is due to the indirect discourse.

cōnsuētūdinem, ut sociōs atque amīcōs nōn modo suī nihil dēperdere, sed grātiā, dignitāte, honōre auctiōrēs vellet esse; quod vērō ad amīcitiam populī Rōmānī attulissent, id iīs ēripī quis patī posset? 44. Ariovistus ad postulāta Caesaris pauca respondit, dē suīs virtūtibus multa praedicāvit: Trānsīsse Rhēnum sēsē nōn suā sponte, sed rogātum et arcessītum ā Gallīs; nōn sine magnā spē magnīsque praemiīs domum propinquōsque relīquisse; sēdēs habēre in Galliā ab ipsīs concessās, obsidēs ipsōrum voluntāte datōs; stīpendium capere iūre bellī quod victōrēs victīs impōnere cōnsuērint. at, conj., but, at least. ∗

19. ut vellet, "to wish"; a substantive clause of result, in apposition with hanc consuētūdinem.

20. sed auctiōrēs esse, "but rather to be advanced."

21. iīs: for case, cf. note on 42, 16.

22. quis posset: the direct form was quis possit, "who would be able?" and the subjunctive is retained in the indirect discourse.

23. dederat: as stated in chap. 35.

24. īnferret, etc.: subjunctives of command in indirect discourse. What was the direct form of nē īnferret? App. 219: G.-L. 271, 2: A. 450: B. 276, c: H.-B. 501, 3, a, 2: H. 561, 1.

Chap. 44. Ariovistus justifies his own course and makes counter demands and proposals.

5. ab ipsīs: sc. Gallīs.

6. iūre: ablative of accordance.

7. cōnsuērint: the tenses in the early part of this chapter are due to repraesentatio.

10. ūnō proeliō: the battle at Magetobriga: cf. 31, 41.

13. amīcitiam sibi ōrnāmentō esse oportēre, lit. "that it was right for the friendship to be to him for an honor." Make English of this.

15. petīsse: sc. eam, referring to amīcitiam, as the object. The king admits that he had sued for the honor.

17. quam, "than."

quod, "as to the fact that."

21. prius quam populum Rōmānum: prius quam = priusquam, a conjunction, and the more accurate expression would be priusquam populus Rōmānus vēnerit. The truth of the statement is denied by Caesar in the next chapter.

24. quid sibi vellet, lit. "what did he wish for himself?" an idiomatic expression for "what did he mean?" For mode, see App. 268, I: G.-L. 651: A. 586: B. 315, 1: H.-B. 537: H. 642.

suās refers to Ariovistus.

suam hanc esse Galliam, sīcut illam nostram. Ut ipsī concēdī nōn oportēret, sī in nostrōs fīnēs impetum faceret, sīc item nōs esse inīquōs, quod in suō iūre sē interpellārēmus. Dēbēre sē suspicārī simulātā Caesarem amīcitiā, quod exercitum in Galliā habeat, suī opprimendī causā habēre. regiō, -ōnis, f. [regō, keep straight], line, direction; quarter, region, country, territory, place; ē regione, with gen., opposite. ∗

25. hanc Galliam, "this (part of) Gaul." He claims that his right of possession in the land near the Rhine is as clear as that of the Romans in the Roman province.

ut . . . oportēret, "just as there ought to be no yielding to him." The direct form of the conditional sentence was probably oporteat, sī faciam, lit. "it would be right if I should make." This is a less vivid future condition: App. 257: G.-L. 596: A. 516, 2, b: B. 303: H.-B. 580: H. 576. Such a condition has the same form in indirect discourse as a vivid future condition, and can be distinguished only by the sense of the passage.

27. quod dīceret, "as to the fact that he said," or "as to his statement."

29. imperītum rērum, "ignorant of political matters."

30. bellō Allobrogum: cf. note on 6, 7.

Haeduōs . . . ūsōs esse: Ariovistus here lays his finger on the weak point in Caesar's argument; for in fact the alliance of the Haedui and the Romans had been mere words until now when it suited Caesar's purpose to consider it binding.

31. ipsōs=Haeduōs.

32. dēbēre sē suspicārī, "he had a right to suspect."

33. simulātā amīcitiā, "although he made a pretense of friendship" toward Ariovistus.

35. sēsē . . . amīcō habitūrum, "he would regard him [Caesar] not as a friend."

37. multīs . . . factūrum: as the head of the democratic party, Caesar had made many bitter enemies in the aristocratic party, especially during his consulship. It is entirely possible that some of them had indicated to Ariovistus their desire to have him put out of the way.

38. id compertum habēre differs very slightly from id comperīsse, "had found this out." This means "he possessed this as a thing fully ascertained"; App. 286, b: G.-L. 238: A. 497, b: B. 337, 6: H.-B. 605, 5, a: H. 640, 2.

Chap. 45. Caesar insists on Roman rights in Gaul.

1. in eam sententiam, quārē, lit. "to this effect, why" = "to show why." quārē posset is an indirect question.

3. patī utī dēsereret, "allowed him to abandon." patior is usually followed by an infinitive instead of an ut clause.

4. Ariovistī, populī Rōmānī: predicative genitives of possession.

5. superātōs esse: in the year 121, at the time when the Allobroges were conquered. As this was fifty years before Ariovistus had entered Gaul, it disposed of the claim (44, 2) that Ariovistus had come into the country before the Roman people.

6. neque . . . redēgisset: the intransitive ignōvisset governs the dative, quibus; but redēgisset is transitive and we must supply quōs; quibus is needed again with imposuisset. The Arverni and Ruteni lay on the other side of the Cevennes Mountains, which formed a natural frontier for the Roman province: this was the real reason for the forbearance of the Romans.

8. antīquissimum quodque tempus, lit. "each most ancient time"= "priority of time."

11. lēgibus: ablative with ūtī.

voluisset: sc. senātus as the subject.

7. committendum ut dīcī posset, lit. "that it ought to be permitted that it could be said"="that he ought to permit it to be said."

pulsīs hostibus, "after the defeat of the enemy."

8. per fidem, "because of their confidence (in Caesar's honor)." This is equivalent to saying "treacherously."

9. Procillus, -ī, m., Gaius Valerius

9. quā arrogantiā ūsus, "using what arrogance" = "with what arrogance. It is often well to translate ūsus in this way.

10. omnī . . . interdīxisset, "had forbidden the Romans all Gaul." Galliā is an ablative of separation. Rōmānīs is the indirect object.

11. ut, "how," introduces both fēcissent and dirēmisset. It would more naturally precede impetum.

Chap. 47. Ariovistus requests a second conference, but seizes the envoys sent by Caesar.

1. bīduō post, "on the following day." The literal meaning is "afterwards by two days," but the Latin writer counts the day of the interview as one, the next day as the second. In this case the meaning is proved by l. 5.

2. quae agī coeptae essent, "which had begun to be discussed," or better, "which they had begun to discuss." The passive forms of coepī are used when the dependent infinitive is in the passive voice.

3. utī cōnstitueret: a substantive clause, the object of an implied verb of asking.

4. lēgātīs, "legates," not "envoys." Ariovistus wished to confer with an officer of the highest rank, if Caesar should refuse a second personal interview.

5. colloquendī . . . est, "Caesar saw no occasion for a conference."

prīdiē eius diēī is only a fuller expression for prīdiē, and has the same meaning.

6. retinērī quīn conicerent, "be kept from casting." For construction see App. 228, c: G.-L. 554: A. 558: B. 295, 3: H.-B. 502, 3, b: H. 595, 2.

12. quā multā ūtēbātur, "which Ariovistus spoke fluently."

13. in eō, "in his case."

14. Germānīs: dative of possessor.

esset: implied indirect discourse, for Caesar is quoting the reason which influenced him at the time of his action: "because (as he thought) the Germans had."

ūnā, "with him."

15. hospitiō, "guest-friendship." This is an awkward rendering, but as we no longer recognize such a relationship we have no name for it. In its simplest form it bound two men, residing in different states, to give hospitality or render other services to each other whenever occasion arose. A similar relationship might exist between a man and a state, or between two states. The obligation was peculiarly binding and sacred.

17. conclāmāvit, etc.: Ariovistus was angry at his failure to secure an interview with either Caesar or one of Caesar's legates.

18. an is not to be translated. The full thought is something like "is it for anything else, or, etc." By such an ellipsis of the first alternative an not infrequently introduces a simple question, though its proper place is in the second alternative of a double question.

cōnantēs, "while they were attempting."

48. Eōdem diē castra prōmōvit et mīlibus passuum sex ā Caesaris castrīs sub monte cōnsēdit. Chap. 48-54. After some maneuvering Caesar forces Ariovistus to give battle and destroys the German host.

Chap. 48. Ariovistus marches past Caesar's camp. The German cavalry tactics.

1. mīlibus: ablative of measure of difference. Ariovistus had been twenty-four miles north of Caesar's camp.

2. sub monte: at the foot of the Vosges Mountains.

postrīdiē eius diēī = postrīdiē. Cf. note on 47, 5.

praeter castra: see the plan, p. 153. Ariovistus marched on high ground along the foothills of the mountains, so that Caesar could not safely attack him as he passed the Roman camp.

5. supportārētur: mode? App. 274: G.-L. 663, 1: A. 593: B. 324, 1: H.-B. 539: H. 652.

interclūderet: Ariovistus did not encamp on the road which the convoys of provisions would have to take, for he preferred a safer position on the hills; but he was near enough to the road to cut off the supplies if they tried to pass.

6. prō castrīs: this was the favorite position for a battle, since the camp formed a place of refuge if the Romans should be defeated (Int. 49). Although Caesar could not tempt the Germans to fight him in this position, he at least encouraged his men by making it clear that the Germans were not anxious to fight them.

7. aciem . . . habuit, "kept his line drawn up."

ut deesset: a purpose clause, although nē is regularly used in negative purpose clauses instead of ut nōn. Here nōn belongs closely with the verb, nōn deesset, lit. "might not be lacking" = "might be offered him."

8. vellet: implied indirect discourse, for the thought in Caesar's mind was sī vult, "if he wishes."

9. castrīs, "in camp." Why not in castrīs? App. 151, c: G.-L. 389: A. 409: B. 218, 7: H.-B. 423: H. 476. Ariovistus had a superstitious reason for refusing to fight, as appears later.

10. proeliō: cf. references on castrīs, l. 9.

Chap. 49. Caesar constructs a smaller camp, beyond the camp of Ariovistus.

Chap. 50. Ariovistus unsuccessfully attacks the smaller camp. Caesar learns that he wishes to postpone the decisive battle.

1. īnstitūtō: ablative of accordance.

2. paulum . . . prōgressus: Caesar had failed to secure a battle in the position most favorable to himself (see 48, b, and note); therefore he now offered battle in a position equally favorable to both armies.

7. utrimque pugnātum est, "both sides fought."

9. quam ob rem, "why," is here interrogative and introduces an indirect question.

10. proeliō: see note on castrīs, 48, 9.

dēcertāret: i.e. fight a general and decisive battle.

11. quod ea cōnsuētūdō esset, "that there was this custom," is a substantive quod clause in apposition with hanc causam. The subjunctive is due to implied indirect discourse.

ut dēclārārent: a substantive clause of result in apposition with ea cōnsuētūdō.

mātrēs familiae: Tacitus tells us that the Germans ascribed prophetic powers to their women. He describes the lots (sortibus, l. 12) as twigs, cut into small pieces, marked, and scattered on a white cloth. Three of them were picked up at random, and an examination of the marks (runes) disclosed the will of the gods.

eōrum sortibus et vāticinātiōnibus dēclārārent utrum proelium committī ex ūsū esset necne; eās ita dīcere: Nōn esse fās Germānōs superāre, sī ante novam lūnam proeliō contendissent.

14. sī contendissent, "if they should fight." contendissent stands for a future perfect of the direct form.

novam lūnam: this fell on Sept. 18.

Chap. 51. Caesar compels Ariovistus to prepare for battle.

2. quod . . . vīsum est, "(a garrison) which seemed to be sufficient."

ālāriōs: the word got the meaning "auxiliaries" from the fact that in earlier times the Romans posted the auxiliaries on the wings of the battle-line. For Caesar's use of such troops see Int. 47.

3. multitūdine: ablative of specification.

4. prō, "in comparison with."

6. necessāriō: the Germans did not entrench their camps. As Caesar was evidently about to attack them, and as there was no room for a battle-line in their camp, they had to come out. Caesar probably had to make the attack uphill, but there was a great advantage in forcing the enemy to fight at a time when they believed they could not conquer.

7. generātim, etc.: about 150 years later, Tacitus speaks thus of the Germans: "And what most stimulates their courage is, that their squadrons or battalions, instead of being formed by chance or by a fortuitous gathering, are composed of families and clans. Close by them, too, are those dearest to them, so that they hear the shrieks of women, the cries of infants. They are to every man the most sacred witnesses of his bravery—they are his most generous applauders. The soldier brings his wounds to mother and wife, who shrink not from counting or even demanding them, and who administer both food the soldiers leaped on the roof of shields. If the Romans had been able to begin the battle with the customary volley of javelins, this solid array of shields would have been broken up as it was in the battle with the Helvetii, 25, 3-10. īnsilīrent: subjunctive in a clause of characteristic.

11. cum, "though."

ā sinistrō cornū, "on the left wing," which was the weakest part of the German line.

14. expedītior, "freer to act." Crassus and the cavalry were posted behind the Roman left wing (see plan, p. 153), out of the way of the German cavalry, for whom they were no match. They were taking no part in the battle, but were waiting to pursue the enemy when the legions should win the victory.

15. tertiam aciem: as usual, this was being held in reserve for just such an emergency.

labōrantibus nostrīs subsidiō, "to the assistance of our hard-pressed men."

1. terga vertērunt: the line of wagons (51, 9) might hinder their flight, but could not entirely prevent it. It is possible, too, that during the battle the Germans had advanced so far that there was space enough for flight between the wagons and the German line.

2. flūmen Rhēnum: as the Rhine is much more than five miles from the battlefield, it is probable that the Ill river is meant, and that Caesar mistook it for the Rhine.

BOOK II. WAR WITH THE BELGAE

Caesar's first year of fighting had brought central Gaul under Roman control (see map facing p. 117), and this fact was made clear to the Gauls when Caesar kept his army through the winter in Vesontio; for no Roman army had ever before been stationed north of the Province. The Belgae, fearing that they would be attacked next, formed during the winter a league of defense, and levied a force of nearly three hundred thousand men, which they massed not far from the southern frontier. Early in the spring Caesar moved against them. At his approach the Remi, ambitious to gain supreme power in Belgium as the Haedui had in central Gaul, came to terms with him and furnished him valuable information regarding the strength of the allied army. At first he did not venture to attack with his much smaller army an enemy so noted for daring and warlike skill as the Belgae. Therefore he chose a strong position on the Axona (Aisne) river, and sent a force of the Haedui under Diviciacus to ravage the territory of the Bellovaci, hoping by this means to break up the army of the enemy. The Belgae made an unsuccessful assault upon Bibrax, a town of the Remi, and then encamped before Caesar's position on the Axona. A little skirmishing discouraged the badly organized and poorly fed Belgic army. The men of each state went off to defend their own territory, all falsely promising to come to the rescue of whichever state Caesar should first attack. Caesar was thus left free to deal with the states one at a time.

Sweeping through western Belgium he quickly received the submission of the Suessiones, the Bellovaci, and the Ambiani. No doubt the neighboring states too sent envoys of peace, though they are not mentioned. The eastern tribes, however, still remained unconquered and defiant. Forming a second and closer union, the Nervii, the Viromandui, and the Atrebates assembled a numerous army in the forests near the Sabis (Sambre) river, and planned to surprise and destroy the legions while separated on the march. When the Roman van reached the stream and began to fortify a camp, the enemy suddenly burst out of the coverts near by and fell upon it; Caesar was taken unawares. So fierce was the conflict and so great the danger that he seized a shield and fought in the foremost rank. After long uncertainty, Roman tactics and discipline prevailed. The enemy lost heavily, especially the Nervii, who made the last desperate stand and were slain almost to a man.

The battle of the Sabis was decisive. Only the Atuatuci dared to raise a brave but ineffectual opposition. They were quickly subdued, and on account of an attempt at treachery were sold into slavery. The conquest of Belgium was complete, with the exception of the Morini and the Menapii, who were not attacked and who sent no envoys. With his customary moderation Caesar was content with a general disarmament and the furnishing of hostages. The treacherous Remi were raised to supreme power in Belgium, and were thus firmly attached to the Roman interest.

Meanwhile, the states of northwestern Gaul had submitted to Publius Crassus, Caesar's legate, apparently without fighting.

This is one of the most interesting of the Gallic campaigns in its presentation of the strong qualities of the Roman leader. His tactical skill, celerity of movement, energy, and courage are seen at their best. Yet the surprise at the Sabis was due to his failure to observe the most common rules of prudence in the presence of the enemy. That it was not a disastrous defeat must be attributed chiefly to the excellence of his soldiers.

EXPLANATION OF CAMPAIGN MAP

For the meaning of the colors, see the explanation of the campaign map for I, 1-29, facing p. 42.

The same territory is colored red as in the campaign map for I, 30-54, facing p. 117. In addition, the Nervii, the Viromandui, the Atrebates, and the Atuatuci are colored red, for they seriously fought with Caesar.

Most of the rest of Belgium is colored blue, though it is hard to decide between blue and red for some of the states. Although all the states had promised to send quotas to the great army which melted away before Caesar at the Axona, we cannot be sure how many did so; and it can hardly be said that Caesar won the submission of the several states by defeating that army. The Suessiones prepared to fight, but did not do so. The Bellovaci and the Ambiani did not even prepare to fight. Therefore these three states are colored blue. The states which are not mentioned must in general have sent embassies of submission; but the Morini and the Menapii are left uncolored, because in III, 28 we are told that they had never sued for peace.

The northwestern states mentioned in chap. 34 are colored blue. Crassus went to them with only one legion, and the events of Book III make it certain that one legion could not have defeated those states in battle. Evidently they submitted without fighting.

The battle-fields on the Axona and on the Sabis are as certain as they well can be. The site of the town of the Atuatuci is very uncertain. The one indicated on the map is Mont Falhize, championed by Von Göler (Caesars Gallischer Krieg, pp, 90 ff.). Caesar does not tell us that the town was on a river; but all the other sites which have been suggested are open to more serious objections.

7. sollicitō, 1, tr., move violently, stir up, agitate; incite, tempt, instigate. 2.

Chap. 1. The Belgae form a league against Caesar.

1. citeriōre Galliā: Caesar's province south of the Alps; now northern Italy.

dēmōnstrāvimus: in I, 54. Caesar uses the rhetorical we. Caesar the writer is spoken of in the first person, Caesar the general in the third.

3. Labiēnī: as commander of the winter quarters, he of course sent regular reports to Caesar on all matters of importance.

certior fīēbat, "was informed from time to time." The imperfect of repeated action.

Belgās: see Int. 28.

quam . . . dīxerāmus, "who, as I said, are a third part of Gaul." quam refers to Belgās, but agrees in gender and number with the predicate noun partem. The pluperfect dīxerāmus is occasionally used in such statements instead of the more common perfect.

4. coniūrāre, "were forming a league," not "conspiring." The Belgae were not rebelling, for they had never been subject to Rome. Caesar had no scruples about conquering them, but he did not treat them as rebels.

6. quod verērentur: a substantive quod clause, in apposition with causās. The subjunctive is due to indirect discourse.

omnī . . . Galliā, "now that all Gaul had been brought under control." Galliā here refers only to Celtic Gaul. See Int. 28.

7. sollicitārentur: the indirect discourse still continues, but stops at this point. Apparently Labienus reported the two reasons for the action of the Belgae, but Caesar himself supplies the three reasons why Celtic Gauls instigated a rising of the Belgae.

partim quī, ut Germānōs diūtius in Galliā versārī nōluerant, ita populī Rōmānī exercitum hiemāre atque inveterāscere in Galliā molestē ferēbant, partim quī mōbilitāte et levitāte animī novīs imperiīs studēbant, ab nōn nūllīs etiam, quod in Galliā ā potentiōribus atque iīs quī ad condūcendōs hominēs facultātēs habēbant vulgō rēgna occupābantur, quī minus facile eam rem imperiō nostrō cōnsequī poterant.

8. partim, adv. [acc. of pars, part], partly, in part; partim . . . partim, some . . . others. 4.

versō, 1, tr., turn; deal with; pass. as deponent, turn one's self; be, remain; engage in; fight. *

9. inveterāscō, -veterāscere, -veterāvī, -veterātum, intr., grow old; become established. 1.

10. molestē, adv., with annoyance; molestē ferre, be annoyed. 1.

13. vulgō, adv. [vulgus, the crowd], commonly; everywhere. 2.

8. partim quī, "some of whom"; i.e. the opponents of all foreigners.

10. partim quī, "others of whom."

mōbilitāte et levitāte: Caesar often speaks of these qualities as characteristic of the Gauls.

11. ab nōn nūllīs (sollicitārentur): a third class, such men as Orgetorix (I, 2), Casticus (I, 3), and Dumnorix (I, 18).

12. ad . . . hominēs, "for employing mercenaries."

13. quī . . . poterant: see Int. 29, end. Of course this power of the nobles would be held in check by a strong government like that of the Romans.

1. duās legiōnēs: Caesar now had eight legions, numbered consecutively from VII to XIV, approximately 32,000 legionary soldiers. In addition he had auxiliary cavalry and infantry, on whom, however, he placed little reliance. See Int. 32, 33.

plērōsque Belgās: the remainder of the chapter is in indirect discourse. The direct form is given after Book VII.

As explained under II, 1, each of the most common principles of syntax is referred to three times in the notes on Book II. At the end of the chapter in which the third reference to any construction has been given, attention is called to the fact; and if the pupil has not yet mastered the construction he should do so at once.

sagittārius, -rī, m. [sagitta, an arrow], bowman, archer. 3.

3. funditor, -ōris, m. [funda, sling], slinger. 4.

Baliāris, -e, adj., Balearic (băl"ē-ā'rĭk), (i.e. coming from the islands Majorca and Minorca) 1.

oppidānus, -a, -um, adj. [oppidum, town], of or pertaining to a town; in pl. as noun, townspeople, inhabitants of a town. 2.

4. dēfēnsiō, -ōnis, f. [dēfendō, defend], a defending, defense. 1.

prōpugnō, 1, intr., fight for, defend; rush out to fight, attack. 1.

9. fūmus, -ī, m., smoke. 1.

3. mittit: the auxiliaries probably entered the town on the south side, where the slope of the hill was very steep. The Belgae could not attack effectively on that side and would be likely to leave it unguarded.

quōrum adventū, "at their arrival"; an ablative of time, but with a suggestion of cause as well.

4. et . . . et, "not only . . . but also."

cum spē dēfēnsiōnis, "along with the hope of (making a successful) defense."

5. hostibus discessit, lit. "went away for the enemy '="left the enemy." hostibus is a dative of reference. As the idea here is one of separation, it may be called a dative of separation.

potiundī: the older form of the gerundive, for potiendī. How can potior, an intransitive verb, have a gerundive? App. 289, I, a: G.-L. 427, 4, 5: A. 503, n. 2: B. 339, 4: H.-B. 613, 2, b, n.: H. 623, 1.

6. morātī, dēpopulātī: as moror and dēpopulor are deponent verbs, their perfect participles have active meanings; therefore they agree with the subject of contendērunt. But as incēnsus is passive in meaning, the idea "having burned their villages" must be expressed by the ablative absolute.

7. quō: the adverb.

8. ā . . . duōbus, "less than two miles away"; i.e. from Caesar's camp. ab is here used adverbially; mīlibus is the ablative of degree of difference, the comparative minus not affecting the construction. See App. 139, b: G.-L. 296, R. 4: A. 407, c: B. 217, 3: H.-B. 416, d: H. 471, 4.

4. perīclitor, 1, tr. and intr. [perīculum, trial, danger], try, test; be in danger or peril. 1.

10. mīlibus: ablative after the comparative amplius. The references on l. 8 say only that plūs, minus, amplius, and longius are not necessarily followed by the ablative.

Chap. 8. Caesar fortifies his position and prepares for battle.

1. multitūdinem: if the states sent the quotas promised in chap. 4, the total was 296,000 men; but probably not all were sent.

2. opīniōnem virtūtis, "reputation for valor."

proeliō: ablative of separation.

4. nostrī: especially the Gallic cavalry. The Belgae were thought to be better fighters than the Celtic Gauls.

5. The following description is less clear than most of Caesar's descriptions of places, so that it cannot be understood without constant reference to the plan. The camp and trenches were discovered in the course of excavations made at the order of Emperor Napoleon III. The ridge on which the camp lay is about two miles in length, extending

Therefore the front of the camp was the west side, looking toward the battle line; but the front of the hill was the north side, looking toward the enemy. Caesar calls the north and the south slopes of the hill its latera.

7. tantum . . . poterat, lit. "extended so much opposite (to the enemy) as of space a line drawn up could fill" = "was as wide on the side facing the enemy as a battle line could extend."

in lātitūdinem: i.e. from the camp to the west end of the hill. Perhaps we should call this the length of the hill.

9. ex . . . lateris, lit. "at each end of the side" = "at each end"; i.e. the east and west ends of the hill. utrāque parte alone might mean either the ends or the sides. As latus means one of the long sides of the hill, utrāque parte lateris must mean the ends.

10. ab utrōque latere, "on each side"; i.e. on the northern and southern slopes.

11. trānsversam, "at right angles" to the ridge. The plan shows that one trench ran from the camp to the Miette, the other from the camp to the Axona.

12. extrēmās: i.e. the outer ends.

tormenta: see Int. 63.

13. īnstrūxisset: implied indirect discourse for the future perfect, for Caesar's thought was "that I may not be surrounded when I shall have drawn up my line."

14. ab lateribus, "on the flanks." The trenches protected only the right flank of the army, but the left was sufficiently protected by the Miette.

Chap. 9-11. The Belgae return home without risking a decisive battle.

Chap. 9. Not venturing to attack Caesar, the Belgae attempt to pass him by a ford.

1. palūs erat, "there was a marsh"; i.e. the marshy ground along the Miette.

3. sī . . . fieret, "if they should begin to cross." The clause depends on ut aggrederentur, and the subjunctive is due to implied indirect discourse; for Caesar's thought was "I will have my men ready to attack if they shall begin."

impedītōs: i.e. by crossing the marsh.

6. faciunt: historical present, for the more usual perfect after ubi.

secundiōre proeliō: ablative absolute.

8. contendērunt: Caesar did not see this movement, probably because of an intervening forest.

9. vadīs: the probable location of these fords is shown in the plan by crossed sabres.

10. eō cōnsiliō, ut, etc., "with this design, to storm, if they could, etc."

possent: implied indirect discourse for the future indicative; for they thought "we will storm if we shall be able." But praeerat is indicative, because it is an explanation added by Caesar, not a part of their thought.

16. dēspērātīs, "despairing of."

17. castrīs: what deponent verbs govern the ablative?

Chap. 25. Caesar finds the 7th and 12th legions in desperate straits, and reanimates them by his valor.

1. Caesar: subject of prōcessit (l. 15) and iussit (l. 16). This is an excellent Latin "period," with the subject first, the subordinate clauses in the middle, and the principal verbs toward the end. The sentence is not hard to understand in its Latin order, and is very effective; for the mass of subordinate clauses represents the impression made on Caesar when he saw all at once the many details of the fearful struggle. But it is hard to translate effectively, because such a sentence is intolerable in English. After the pupil thoroughly understands the sentence he should translate it very freely, breaking it up into a number of short sentences. Each of the following groups of words may be turned into a sentence, or two or more may be combined: Caesar . . . profectus; ubi . . . urgērī; signīs . . . vīdit; quārtae . . . āmissō; reliquārum . . . occīsīs; in hīs . . . posset; reliquōs . . . vītāre; hostēs . . . īnstāre; et . . . posset; scūtō . . . prōcessit; centuriōnibus . . . possent.

2. ubi, "when"; with vīdit, l. 4, which is repeated in l. 12.

urgērī: this and most of the other infinitives before the end of l. 12 depend on vīdit. Other dependent ideas are expressed by the ablative absolute.

signīs collātīs: the position of the standards regulated the position of the cohorts. As the standards were now huddled together, the soldiers naturally crowded together.

3. sibi . . . impedīmentō, lit. "were themselves for a hindrance to themselves for fighting" = "hindered one another in fighting."

4. quārtae cohortis: this cohort had suffered especially, because it was stationed at the left end of the front line.

5. signō āmissō: regarded as a great disgrace.

2. tribūnōs: see Int. 41.

3. sēsē coniungerent: i.e. to close up the gap between them.

conversa signa īnferrent, "to face about and attack." Of course only a part of the Romans were to face about. Probably the rear line faced about, and the cohorts at the ends of the line wheeled half around. Thus an oblong would be formed, facing the enemy on every side.

4. cum . . . ferret, "since they protected one another."

5. timērent: agreeing with mīlitēs, which is implied in alius aliī.

āversī, "in the rear."

14. nihil . . . fēcērunt, lit. "made nothing of a remainder as regards speed" = "made all possible speed." This legion fell upon the rear of the Nervii.

Chap. 27. The Nervii are slain, fighting desperately.

2. quī, "those who." The clause is determinative, not characteristic; App. 231: H.-B. 550. The subjunctive is due to attraction; App. 274: G.-L. 663, 1: A. 593: B. 324, 1: H.-B. 539: H. 652.

scūtīs: case? App. 143, a: G.-L. 401, n. 6: A. 431: B. 218, 3: H.-B. 438, 1: H. 476, 3.

4. victōribus . . . tūtum, "that nothing was an obstacle to the victors and nothing safe for the conquered."

5. quī supererant: compare quī superessent, 27, 9. This clause has precisely the same meaning, but does not depend on a subjunctive.

8. vix ad quīngentōs: this has been considered an exaggeration, because the Nervii revolted again three years later, and put 5,000 men in the field two years after that. But in so large a state there must have been thousands of boys too young to fight in the present battle, but old enough to fight a few years later.

quī possent: a clause of characteristic, and therefore subjunctive in the direct discourse.

11. iussit, imperāvit: the sentence illustrates well the contrasting constructions with these verbs. iubeō regularly governs an accusative and infinitive; imperō, the dative with ut and the subjunctive.

Chap. 29-33. Caesar subdues the Atuatuci.

Chap. 29. The Atuatuci take refuge in a stronghold. Their origin.

1. suprā: in 16, 7.

cum venīrent, "while coming."

omnibus cōpiīs: ablative of manner. Such ablatives are often called "military accompaniment," but it is not logical to say that the Atuatuci came in company with themselves.

4. oppidum: for its probable location see map facing p. 162.

5. quod cum, "although this town."

ex . . . partibus, "at all (other) points in its circumference," or simply "on all (other) sides."

THE TOWN OF THE ATUATUCI

12. agere ac portāre, "to drive and to carry"; for impedīmentīs here means "possessions" rather than "baggage," and includes cattle.

13. custōdiam . . . relīquerant, lit. "had left along (with their possessions) a guard of their (men) and a garrison, six thousand men (in all)."

14. eōrum: the main bodies of the Cimbri and Teutoni.

15. cum . . . dēfenderent: some cum clauses are best translated by participles; so here, "sometimes making war, sometimes defending themselves against war made on them," lit. "when they . . . warded off war made (on them)."

16. cōnsēnsū . . . factā, "peace was made by common consent, and." eōrum refers to both the Atuatuci and their neighbors.

3. pedum XII: in height.

XV mīlium: supply pedum as a partitive genitive; "(of) 15,000 feet in circumference"; i.e. three miles. The plan shows that the wall did not cross the river, which itself forms a sufficient obstacle.

4. oppidō: ablative of means, but to be translated as if an ablative of place.

5. vīneīs, aggere, turrim: see Int. 61; 62, d. The vineae afforded shelter to the soldiers who made the agger. In this case the agger was intended only as a roadway up which to push the tower.

BOOK III. OPERATIONS IN THE ALPS, IN THE NORTHWEST, AND IN AQUITANIA

Since Rome was to possess Gaul, she needed to control the shortest route across the Alps—that which leads over the Great St. Bernard pass. Caesar accordingly sent Galba with one legion, in the autumn of 57, to subdue the mountain tribes which controlled that route. Having apparently accomplished this, Galba went into winter quarters in a little town at the foot of the northern slope of the mountains. Here he was attacked by an overwhelming force of mountaineers, whom, however, he succeeded in driving off after a sharp engagement. He then retreated to a less exposed position. The tribes were not thoroughly conquered, but as we hear of no further operations against them it is evident that they stopped molesting travellers.

In 57 the northwestern states had submitted to Crassus and had sent him hostages; but when he established winter quarters among them and began sending out officers to levy tribute of supplies, they grew weary of the yoke. Ignorant of the Roman resources and power, three states took the fatal step of arresting the officers sent to them. This virtual declaration of war was followed by the formation of a powerful league of the coast tribes between the Loire and the Seine. The Britanni, the Morini, and the Menapii sent men and ships to their aid.

As early as possible in 56 Caesar hastened to Gaul and gave orders for an extensive campaign. In order to prevent any effective co-öperation on the part of his enemies, he divided his forces. Titus Labienus, with part of the cavalry, was sent toward the Rhine to check a possible uprising among the Belgae and to prevent the Germans from crossing. Quintus Titurius Sabinus went to the country of the Venelli to cut off communications between the eastern and the western portions of the confederacy. Publius Crassus marched into Aquitania to prevent help reaching the insurgents from that quarter. Caesar himself, with the assistance of a strong fleet under Decimus Brutus, undertook the conquest of the Veneti, the most powerful sea-board state and the forefront of the confederacy.

The Veneti skilfully utilized the advantages of their position. Their country was wild and barren and their strongholds were built on the ends of promontories which the tides cut off from the main land. Hence supplies for the Roman army were obtained with difficulty and siege operations were greatly hindered. The Veneti, on the other hand, had control of the sea and could supply their towns at will with provisions and defenders, or if necessary could transport the garrisons to other places, leaving the foe only a barren victory. The Roman fleet would have prevented this, but it was kept away by stormy weather during most of the summer. When it finally appeared, the much superior fleet of the Veneti confidently sailed out to meet it; but Roman valor and ingenuity won the day. The destruction of their fleet forced the Veneti to submit. Their prominence in the revolt marked them out for severe punishment, as a warning to other Gallic states. Accordingly the senate was put to the sword and the people were sold as slaves.

The legates of Caesar were as successful as himself. Sabinus easily defeated Viridovix, the general in command of the land forces of the confederacy. Labienus overawed the Belgae. Crassus, after much fighting, subdued Aquitania. In all Gaul only the Morini and the Menapii had made no submission. Therefore Caesar marched against them; but after making strenuous efforts to reach the foe, in almost impenetrable forests and swamps, the approach of winter warned him to desist. Quartering his legions upon the conquered tribes, as in the previous winter, he proceeded to Italy.

For the meaning of the colors, see the explanation of the campaign map for I, 1-29, facing page 42.

The same territory is colored red as in the campaign map for Book II, facing page 162. In addition, a narrow strip leading into the Alps, most of the northwestern states, and three states of Aquitania are colored red. In all these cases it is difficult to decide on the coloring.

It seems probable that Galba did not completely subdue the Nantuates, the Veragri, and the Seduni, but that he did secure the route through the Alps.

It seems probable that all the revolting states in the northwest had sent so large a proportion of their ships and men to help the Veneti, that the defeat of the Venetan fleet amounted to a defeat of all the states. Hence they are colored red. The Redones are not mentioned among the revolting states.

It is possible that all of Aquitania should be colored red; but it seems improbable that other states than the Sotiates, the Tarusates, and the Vocates were so largely represented in the armies defeated by Crassus as to make further resistance impossible. They are colored blue on the theory that they submitted only because they were discouraged by the fate of the states which did fight.

Caesar's army had probably been quartered along the Liger (Loire). Therefore the routes on this map begin at the point of the probable winter quarters farthest east, where Orleans now stands. Marching westward, he picked up another part of his army, and then probably collected the whole of it at the point on the map from which four lines diverge, which is now the site of Angers. From that point he sent out Labienus, Crassus, and Sabinus, and himself marched against the Veneti. From the Veneti Caesar marched against the Morini and the Menapii, and was probably joined on the route by Sabinus and Crassus.

Chap. 1. Galba is sent to secure a pass over the Alps. He occupies Octodurus.

1. cum . . . proficīscerētur: as stated in II, 35. Therefore the narrative given in the first six chapters of Book III belongs chronologically with Book II.

2. legiōne duodecimā: this was one of the two legions which had suffered most severely in the battle with the Nervii; cf. II, 25.

Nantuātēs, etc.: see the map facing p. 217.

3. mīsit: the pupil should notice carefully Caesar's use of the indicative tenses. The distinction between the imperfect and the perfect is difficult for English speaking people to grasp, but Caesar was as careful in their use as in the choice of modes and cases. Study App. 197, 198. Notice that in this chapter the perfect is used in every principal clause. Notice, too, that all but one of these perfects tell something that Caesar or Galba did; i.e. they all narrate events in the story.

4. pertinent: several of the subordinate verbs in this chapter are in the present tense, because they state facts which are still true at the time when Caesar is writing.

5. fuit: this might have been imperfect, for it is not an event in the story. Very few such perfects will be found in Caesar.

quod volēbat, "that he wished"; a substantive quod clause, in apposition with causa. The imperfect does not narrate an event in the story, but describes something (Cæsar's feelings) as going on at the time of a main act (Caesar's decision to send Galba). This is the most common use of the imperfect, and is called the descriptive imperfect.

iter per Alpēs: the route leading over the famous Great St. Bernard pass. For the other route used by Caesar see map facing p. 42.

Note that the imperfect is used in these clauses because they all describe the condition of things existing at the time the Gauls revolted.

6. ut caperent: a substantive clause of fact (result), in apposition with id.

7. neque eam plēnissimam, "and that not at its full strength"; explained by the ablatives absolute which follow.

Chap. 3. The Romans resolve to defend their camp.

1. opus hībernōrum: especially the making of huts. Although they were occupying part of a village, it cannot have been large enough to house all the soldiers.

9. integrīs vīribus: descriptive ablative. Contrast the construction of the same words in l. 4.

quārum . . . poterat, "while none of these things, etc."

10. poterat and dabātur are descriptive imperfects, describing a condition of things that went on all through the battle.

nōn modo dēfessō facultās dabātur, "not only was an opportunity not given to an exhausted man." H. 656, 3; "Nōn modo (or sōlum) nōn, sed nē . . . quidem means not only not, but not even, and nōn modo (sōlum), sed nē . . . quidem, has the same meaning when the verb standing in the second clause belongs also to the first."

11. excēdendī: gerund or gerundive?

Chap. 5. As a last resort Galba decides on a sortie.

1. cum pugnārētur, "when the battle had lasted." The imperfect subjunctive is to be translated on the same principle as is laid down for the imperfect indicative in App. 191, b: G.-L. 234: A. 471, b: B. 260, 4: H.-B. 485: H. 535, 1.

hōrīs: ablative after the comparative, amplius; cf. note on mīlibus, II, 7, 10.

3. languidiōribus nostrīs, "as our men grew weaker"; ablative absolute.

5. cāsum, "extremity."

quem . . . dīximus: cf. II, 25, 7.

8. accurrunt: the principal verbs in this chapter are all historical presents. The historical present narrates a new event in a story just as the perfect does. It may be followed by either the primary or the secondary tenses of the subjunctive. In this chapter the dependent subjunctives are all imperfects, as if the principal verbs were perfects.

ūnam . . . sī experīrentur, lit. "told him that there was one hope of safety, if they should try" = "that their only hope of safety was to try."

9. extrēmum auxilium, "their last resource."

experīrentur: indirect discourse for the future indicative.

10. mīlitēs certiōrēs facit, "he directed the soldiers." This phrase is followed by indirect discourse, as usual; but all the verbs are in the subjunctive mode, because they represent imperatives of the direct form.

paulisper intermitterent proelium ac tantummodo tēla missa exciperent sēque ex labōre reficerent, post datō signō ex castrīs ērumperent atque omnem spem salūtis in virtūte pōnerent.

6. Quod iussī sunt faciunt, ac subitō omnibus portīs ēruptiōne factā neque cognōscendī quid fieret neque suī colligendī hostibus facultātem relinquunt. Ita commūtātā fortūnā eōs quī in spem potiundōrum castrōrum vēnerant undique circumventōs interficiunt, et ex hominum mīlibus amplius XXX, quem numerum barbarōrum ad castra vēnisse cōnstābat, plūs tertiā parte interfectā reliquōs perterritōs in fugam coniciunt ac nē in locīs quidem superiōribus cōnsistere patiuntur. Sīc omnibus hostium cōpiīs fūsīs armīsque exūtīs sē in castra mūnītiōnēs-

11. tantummodo, adv., only. 1.

12. excipiō, -cipere, -cēpī, -ceptum, tr. and intr. [capiō, take]; tr., take up, catch, receive; take up (in turn); meet, withstand; relieve (of soldiers in battle); intr., follow. ∗

12. exciperent, lit. "catch," on their shields = "shield themselves from."

Chap. 6. The Gauls are routed with great loss. Galba retires from the mountains.

1. quod iussī sunt faciunt, "they did as they had been commanded." iussī sunt is used instead of a pluperfect, just as faciunt is used instead of a perfect. Notice how regularly the indicative tenses are used in this chapter: all the principal verbs are in the perfect or historical present; all the subordinate verbs except iussī sunt are in the imperfect or pluperfect.

2. suī colligendī: cf. note on 4, 12.

3. commūtātā fortūnā: the dangerous plan succeeded, partly because the Romans, like other men, fought with more spirit on the offensive than on the defensive, partly because the enemy were taken by surprise, and partly because the Gauls always lacked persistence and ability to rally from a reverse.

4. potiundōrum castrōrum: how can the intransitive verb potior be used in the gerundive construction? App. 289, I, a: G.-L. 427, 4, 5: A. 503, n. 2: B. 339, 4: H.-B. 613, 2, b, n.: H. 623, 1.

circumventōs: translate by a coördinate clause.

5. ex mīlibus XXX depends on tertiā parte. Galba probably exaggerated the number in his report to Caesar, for those tribes cannot have had 30,000 soldiers.

9. armīs: ablative of separation. The Gauls threw away their arms in their flight.

que suās recipiunt. Quō proeliō factō, quod saepius fortūnam temptāre Galba nōlēbat atque aliō sē in hīberna cōnsiliō vēnisse meminerat, aliīs occurrisse rēbus vīderat, maximē frūmentī commeātūsque inopiā permōtus, posterō diē, omnibus eius vīcī aedificiīs incēnsīs, in prōvinciam revertī contendit ac nūllō hoste prohibente aut iter dēmorante incolumem legiōnem in Nantuātēs, inde in Allobrogēs perdūxit ibique hiemāvit.

10. quod . . . nōlēbat: Galba felt that it would be foolish to court another attack by remaining in so dangerous a position. The complete victory which he had gained made it possible for him to retire with honor. Since Caesar never fought these tribes again, we may suppose that they were taught by this battle not to molest Roman travelers.

11. aliō cōnsiliō, "with one purpose"; namely, to spend the winter there quietly.

12. aliīs . . . rēbus, "that he had met a different state of affairs"; namely, a dangerous battle.

15. in Nantuātēs: there, of course, he picked up the other two cohorts of his legion.

Chap. 7-11. The Aremorican states revolt, under the leadership of the Veneti. Caesar prepares a fleet for their subjugation, and takes measures to prevent a wide-spread uprising of Gaul.

The events of the preceding six chapters occurred in the fall of 57. At this point the events of 56 begin.

Chap. 7. The Aremorican states revolt because Crassus demands supplies from them.

1. omnibus dē causīs, "for every reason"; explained by the ablatives absolute superātīs . . . Sedūnīs, which should be translated by causal clauses.

pācātam (esse) Galliam: this belief was premature, for it took Caesar seven more years to subdue Gaul thoroughly.

2. superātīs Belgīs: cf. II, 1-33.

expulsīs Germānīs: cf. I, 30-54.

victīs Sedūnīs: cf. 1-6. The Seduni were the most important of the tribes there mentioned.

4. quod . . . volēbat: under Augustus, Caesar's successor, the Romans were obliged to conquer the tribes between the Adriatic and the Danube. No doubt Caesar foresaw this necessity and hoped to do the work himself, but Gaul kept his hands full.

haec fuit causa. P. Crassus adulēscēns cum legiōne septimā proximus mare Ōceanum in Andibus hiemābat. operis, "of the works"; explained by the following ablatives absolute.

7. extrūsō . . . adaequātīs: apparently the Romans ran two parallel dykes from the mainland to the town, completing them at low tide, when the ground was dry. 1. Crassus: read 11, 5-8, and see map facing p. 217.

vēnisset, quae, ut ante dictum est, est tertia pars Galliae, cum intellegeret in iīs locīs sibi bellum gerendum ubi paucīs ante annīs L. Valerius Praecōnīnus lēgātus exercitū pulsō interfectus esset, atque unde L. Manlius prōcōnsul impedīmentīs āmissīs profūgisset, nōn mediocrem sibi dīligentiam adhibendam intellegēbat. Itaque rē frūmentāriā prōvīsā, auxiliīs equitātūque comparātō, multīs praetereā virīs fortibus Tolōsā et Carcasōne et Narbōne, quae sunt cīvitātēs Galliae prōvinciae fīnitimae hīs regiōnibus, nōminātim ēvocātīs, in Sotiātium fīnēs exercitum intrōdūxit. Cuius adventū cognitō Sotiātēs magnīs cōpiīs coāctīs equitātūque, quō plūrimum valēbant, in itinere agmen nostrum adortī prīmum equestre proelium commīsērunt, deinde equitātū suō pulsō atque īnsequentibus nostrīs subitō pedestrēs cōpiās, quās in convalle in īnsidiīs collocāverant, ostendērunt. Hī nostrōs disiectōs adortī proelium renovārunt.

2. ante: see I, 1, 2.

3. paucīs annīs: twenty-two or twenty-three years before, in 78 or 79, B.C. Our knowledge of these events is very vague. Manlius, governor of the Gallic province, marched against Sertorius, who was in Spain, and was defeated by a lieutenant of Sertorius. The Aquitani seem to have stripped him of his baggage as he retreated. Nothing whatever is known of Praeconinus.

6. nōn mediocrem, "unusual."

8. auctōritāte, "assurance."

10. ducēs, "as commanders."

Sertōriō: as Sertorius was a Roman general of great ability and had organized his Spanish army after the Roman fashion, those who had served under him understood Roman tactics. But the result shows that it took more than Roman tactics to make a Roman general or army.

BOOK IV. WAR WITH THE GERMANS. FIRST INVASION OF BRITAIN

The campaign of 55 B.C. is memorable in history as the occasion when the Roman arms were first carried beyond the Rhine and across the Channel. The map facing page 217 shows how completely Gaul had come under Caesar's control, either by conquest or by peaceful submission. But Caesar knew that his task was not yet finished. If the Rhine was to be the Roman frontier (Int. 3), the Germans must be taught to respect that frontier. And the unknown Britain, lying so near Gaul, tempted him. It might be worth conquering. If not, at any rate both Gauls and Britons must be shown that Britain could afford neither to send aid to Gaul nor offer refuge to Gauls who wished to escape from Caesar. Only when Caesar had shown that neither the Rhine nor the Channel could stop a Roman army, might he expect Gaul to rest quietly under the Roman yoke.

Two German tribes, the Usipetes and the Tencteri, had been driven out of their homes, far in the interior of Germany, by the Suebi. After wandering homeless for three years, they crossed the Rhine into the Gallic possessions of the Menapii and there spent the early months of 55. Nothing shows more clearly the lack of unity among the states of Gaul than the indifference with which the neighbors of the Menapii regarded this incursion of their hereditary foes. Some states even tried to repeat the mistake of the Sequani (I, 31), and invited the Germans to settle in their territory and make common cause with them against Caesar or the rest of Gaul. But Caesar interfered at once by marching against the Germans. Using as a pretext a treacherous attack by a small body of German cavalry, he made himself guilty of the most treacherous and indefensible act in his whole career. He arrested all their leaders, who had come to apologize for the attack and then surprised and slew almost the whole German host, men, women, and children. If the deed has an excuse it lies in the absolute necessity of teaching the other Germans never to invade Gaul.

Caesar decided to reënforce this terrible lesson by making the Germans fear for their own territory. The Sugambri, who had given refuge to the remnants of the Usipetes and the Tencteri, refused to give them up at Caesar's command. Moreover the Ubii begged Caesar's aid against the Suebi. In the marvellously brief space of ten days he constructed a great bridge across the Rhine, over which he led his entire army. At the first news of his approach the Sugambri and the Suebi had retired into the safe depths of their vast forests. Since it was no part of Caesar's purpose to subjugate these peoples, he contented himself with ravaging the nearer possessions of the Sugambri. Satisfied with this demonstration of Roman power, he recrossed the Rhine and destroyed his bridge, after a stay of only eighteen days on German soil.

Caesar had neither time nor ships enough to attempt a real invasion of Britain this summer, nor could he learn by inquiry anything about the country and the amount of force needed for accomplishing his purpose there. Therefore he determined to devote the remainder of the summer to a preliminary expedition which would at least show him what preparations he must make for the next year. Taking only two legions he sailed to Deal from the nearest point in Gaul. A landing was effected only after a sharp struggle with the Britons. A few nearby tribes surrendered, but Caesar waited for the arrival of his cavalry before penetrating the interior. Just as the cavalry transports were approaching the island, a storm not only drove them back to Gaul but shattered the main fleet, which lay in an exposed roadstead. Caesar beat off an attack of the natives, repaired his ships, and sailed back to Gaul.

Before leaving for Britain, Caesar had received the submission of a part of the Morini. During his absence the remainder of his army harried the Menapii and the rest of the Morini. On the return voyage two ships were driven out of their course, and the men carried by them were attacked by the Morini. A vigorous raid at last caused the final submission of the Morini; but the Menapii still remained unconquered in their forests and swamps.

For the meaning of the colors, see the explanation of the campaign map for I, 1-29, facing page 42.

The coloring in this map is the same as in the campaign map for Book III, facing page 217, except that the Morini and a part of the Menapii are colored red.

Every important geographical point in this year's campaigning is open to discussion. Holmes agrees with some other authorities in locating the battle with the Usipetes and the Tencteri near the junction of the Mosella and the Rhine, but his discussion is less fair than usual. His own arguments, carefully sifted, seem decisive for the location near the junction of the Mosa and the Rhine. If the battle is rightly located, there is no valid argument for locating the bridge elsewhere than at Bonn. Holmes seems to have proved that Wissant, not Boulogne, was the sailing point for Britain. The landing point in Britain must have been either near Deal or a considerable distance west of Deal, near Hythe; it is almost certain that it was near Deal. The map on page 294 gives in more detail the parts of Gaul and Britain which are involved in discussions as to the sailing and landing points.

Cn. Pompēiō, etc.: Pompey and Crassus were Caesar's associates in the First Triumvirate; Int. 11. Their election as consuls for the year 55 had been planned at a meeting with Caesar in the preceding spring. Caesar had been given his province for only five years, and he needed more time. These consuls secured another five years for him, and an important province for each of themselves.

Chap. 6. Caesar joins his army and learns that some Gallic states are welcoming the Germans.

2. ad exercitum: where was it? See III, 29, 11, and the map facing p. 254. Caesar himself, as usual, had spent the winter in Cisalpine Gaul.

3. ea facta (esse), "that those things had happened"; explained by the following clauses.

5. ab Rhēnō discēderent: i.e. to advance further into Gaul. The purpose of the Gauls was to get help against Caesar.

postulāssent: for the future perfect indicative of the direct form.

6. fore parāta, lit. "would be in a prepared condition." This is one of the ways of avoiding the rare future infinitive given in the grammars, parātum īrī The infinitive depends on a verb of saying implied in invītātōs.

lātius vagābantur, etc.: this only means that small bodies were sent out in various directions to see where they could best settle, and that some of them had got as far as the Condrusi (see the map facing p. 254). The main body remained among the Menapii, between the Mosa and the Rhine.

7. quī refers only to Condrūsōrum.

10. permulsīs et cōnfirmātīs: Caesar pretended to believe that they were loyal to him and afraid of the Germans.

equitātū: it appears later that he secured 5,000.

11. cōnstituit, "announced his decision." He had decided the matter long before.

Chap. 7-10. Being met by envoys, Caesar proposes that the Germans settle among the Ubii; he then marches on into a locality whose geographical features he describes.

Chap. 7. Caesar is met on his march by German envoys, who demand land.

1. dēlēctīs, "having levied."

iter coepit: for his route see the map facing p. 254. The envoys must have met him near the point where the route crosses the Mosa.

them. The arrangement would have been advantageous to both parties; for, as the Ubii were nearly a match for the Suebi, the combined Ubii, Usipetes, and Tencteri should have more than held their own.

Chap. 9. The envoys ask for time to consider, but Caesar marches on.

2. post diem tertium, "on the third day"; i.e. the next day but one, since the present day was counted in.

3. propius sē: App. 122, b: G.-L. 359, n. 1: A. 432, a: B. 141, 3: H.-B, 380, b: H. 420, 5.

5. diēbus: ablative of degree of difference.

6. trāns: to the west.

exspectārī equitēs: The German cavalry was far superior to Caesar's, and he could afford to take no risk. However, it is quite possible that the envoys were honest in asking time to consider, for they can have had no power to bind their people to accept Caesar's proposition.

Chap. 10. Description of the Rhine, the Mosa, and their confluence.

1. ex monte Vosegō: more correctly from the plateau lying between the Vosges and the Cevennes.

2. parte quādam, etc.: the Rhine divides at the eastern end of the island of the Batavi. The southern stream, called Vacalus, flows west till it joins the Mosa. The combined Mosa and Vacalus flow on into the sea, making the southern boundary of the island. The confluence of the Mosa and the Vacalus was probably eighty miles from the sea, as Caesar says; but it is now nearer the sea, owing to a change in the river beds.

3. inde: from the confluence.

7. fēcisset: for the future perfect of the direct form.

8. eā condiciōne sē ūsūrōs, "that they would accept the terms"; i.e. the offer to let them settle among the Ubii.

9. trīduī spatium: this seems a short time for the purpose, since the Ubii were some seventy miles away; but there are well authenticated instances of longer rides in less time. The envoys of the Ubii, who were with Caesar, could tell them where to find the authorities, so that no time would be lost in looking them up.

daret: for the imperative of the direct form.

10. eōdem illō pertinēre, "tended to that same object." See 9, 6, and note. It is quite likely that Caesar was mistaken. At any rate their request for time to consult the Ubii was perfectly natural, for they could not know whether the Ubii would respect Caesar's command (8, 8).

13. hūc: i.e. to the camping ground.

1. ubi prīmum, "as soon as."

3. equitēs: why not the ablative after the comparative amplius? App. 139, b. For this attack of 800 cavalry on 5,000, compare 2, 11.

quī ierant: cf. 9, 5.

6. impetū factō: this attack cannot have been authorized by the German leaders. They certainly wanted a truce, whatever their motives may have been, and the defeat of Caesar's cavalry was not important enough to tempt them to break it. Either the German cavalry had failed to receive orders, or it could not resist the delight of attacking a despised foe.

7. cōnsuētūdine: cf. 2, 7.

Cato, Caesar's enemy, proposed in the Roman senate that Caesar be handed over to the Germans for punishment. Caesar's motives may be summed up as follows: 1, a determination to teach the Germans, once for all, never to invade Gaul; 2, a determination to counteract at once the bad effect which the cavalry defeat must have had on the already disaffected Gauls; 3, irritation at the treacherous attack, although everything shows that it was not authorized by the leaders; 4, a real doubt as to whether the Germans were not trying to gain time for the return of their formidable cavalry; 5, the certainty that a pitched battle with the entire force of Germans would cost him the lives of many soldiers.

12. lībertātem, "permission" to remain.

However unjust and brutal Caesar's treatment of the Germans may have been, it served his purpose. More than a year later, when Caesar had lost a legion and a half and all Gaul seemed ripe for revolt, the Treveri tried to get German help. But the Germans replied (V, 55) that the thing had been tried twice, by Ariovistus and by the Tencteri; they would tempt fortune no more.

3. neque suae . . . statuēbat, "he considered it inconsistent with his own dignity, etc." dignitatis is a predicative possessive genitive. The construction of the bridge would impress the barbarians with a high sense of the power and skill of the Romans.

4. summa prōpōnēbātur, "presented itself as very great."

5. lātitūdinem: the bridge was probably built near Bonn, where the river is a little more than a quarter of a mile wide.

6. id contendendum, "that he ought to make the effort."

8. bīna, "two." The distributive is used because there were many such timbers and they were handled two at a time. See plan, a, a.

dīmēnsa ad, "measured according to"; i.e. they were made shorter or longer according to the depth of the river where they were driven into its bed.

9. intervāllō . . . iungēbat, "he joined together [by spiking wooden cross-pieces on them] with a space of two feet [between them." See plan and the pile-driver, p. 273. Intervāllō is an ablative of attendant circumstance.

10. haec . . . dēfīxerat, "when he had let them down into the river by machines and had secured them there." They were probably floated out to the raft on which the pile-driver (p. 273) stood, and were then handled by a derrick or some such simple machine. dēfīxerat: mode? 13. iīs . . . statuēbat: i.e. a similar pair of piles was driven into the river bed opposite to these, forty feet downstream (ab īnferiōre parte), but sloping against the current. See plan, b, b.

14. quadrāgēnum: form? App. 16, e: G.-L. 33, 4: A. 49, d: B. 25, 6: H.-B. 71, 4: H. 84, 3.

The distance must have been measured on the surface of the water: the roadway was therefore a little less than forty feet.

16. haec utraque, "these two pairs," is the subject of distinebantur.

A two-foot beam, exactly filling the space between the piles of each pair (quantum . . . distābat), was laid across from one pair of piles to the pair which faced it (plan, c). These pairs sloped toward each other, and although they were driven into the bottom they would sway with the current and would tend to fall together when the cross-beam had to carry a weight. Therefore they were held at the proper distance apart (distinēbantur) by a pair of fastenings (fībulae) at each end of the two-foot cross beam.

quantum . . . distābat, lit. "as much as the joining of the timbers stood apart." quantum is an accusative of extent of space and has bipedālibus as its antecedent.

17. fībulīs: it is not certain what these "fastenings" were. Those shown in the plan (d, d) are simple and effective, and are occasionally used in modern engineering. The two-foot cross-beam rests on a cross-bar, which is spiked firmly to the outer sides of the piles. Another cross-bar is laid loosely in the opposite angle, and the outer ends of the two cross-bars are lashed firmly together. These two cross-bars are the fībulae. Any ingenious pupil can make a model which will show the effectiveness of this arrangement.

19. ea rērum nātūra, "such was the nature of the structure."

20. incitāvisset is subjunctive by attraction.

hōc . . . tenērentur, "the more firmly the parts of the structure were bound together."

21. haec refers to the part of the structure already described, for which Caesar has no name. In modern engineering it is called a trestle-bent. There were probably between fifty and sixty such trestle-bents. They were connected by timbers laid from one cross-beam to the next, lengthwise of the bridge (dērēctā māteriā). Plan, e.

22. nihilō sētius: i.e. although the bridge was already very strong.

23. et is correlative with et in l. 25.

4. hostibus nostrīs: indirect object of subministrāta.

THE DIRECT FORM OF THE INDIRECT DISCOURSE IN BOOKS I AND II

I, 13, 7-19. Sī pācem populus Rōmānus cum Helvētiīs faciet, in eam partem ībunt atque ibi erunt Helvētiī ubi eōs tū cōnstitueris atque esse volueris; sīn bellō persequī persevērābis, reminīscere et veteris incommodī populī Rōmānī et prīstinae virtūtis Helvētiōrum. I, 30, 3-10. Intellegimus, tametsī prō veteribus Helvētiōrum iniūriīs populī Rōmānī ab hīs poenās bellō repetierīs, tamen eam rem nōn minus ex ūsū Galliae quam populī Rōmānī accidisse, propterea quod eō cōnsiliō flōrentissimīs rēbus domōs suās Helvētiī relīquērunt, utī . . . habērent.

8-56. Galliae tōtīus factiōnēs sunt duae: hārum alterius prīncipātum tenent Haeduī, alterius Arvernī. Hī cum tantopere dē potentātū inter sē multōs annōs contenderent, factum est utī ab Arvernīs Sēquanīsque Germānī mercēde arcesserentur. Sed peius victōribus Sēquanīs quam Haeduīs victīs accidit, propterea quod Ariovistus, rēx Germānōrum, in eōrum fīnibus cōnsēdit tertiamque partem agrī Sēquanī, quī est optimus tōtīus Galliae, occupāvit et nunc dē alterā parte tertiā Sēquanōs dēcēdere iubet, propterea quod paucīs mēnsibus ante Harūdum mīlia hominum XXIV ad eum vēnērunt, quibus locus ac sēdēs parantur. Paucīs annīs omnēs ex Galliae fīnibus pellentur atque omnēs Germānī Rhēnum trānsībunt; neque enim cōnferendus est Gallicus cum Germānōrum agrō, neque haec cōnsuētūdō victūs cum illā comparanda. Ariovistus autem, ut semel Gallōrum cōpiās proeliō vīcit, quod proelium factum est ad Magetobrigam, superbē et crūdēliter imperat, obsidēs nōbilissimī cuiusque līberōs poscit et in eōs omnia exempla cruciātūsque ēdit, sī qua rēs nōn ad nūtum aut ad voluntatem eius facta est. Homō est barbarus, īrācundus, temerārius; nōn possunt eius imperia diūtius sustinērī. Nisi quid in tē populōque Rōmānō erit auxilī, omnibus Gallīs idem est faciendum quod Helvētiī fēcērunt, ut domō . . . experiantur. Haec sī ēnūntiāta Ariovistō erunt, nōn dubitō quīn dē omnibus obsidibus quī apud eum sunt gravissimum supplicium sūmat. Tū vel auctōritāte tuā atque exercitūs vel recentī victōriā vel nōmine populī Rōmānī dēterrēre potes nē maior multitūdō Germānōrum Rhēnum trādūcātur, Galliamque omnem ab Ariovistī iniūriā potes dēfendere.

I, 32, 8-15. APPENDIX

INTRODUCTION

The Appendix was originally prepared for use in the revision of Bellum Helveticum (1900). It has now received a thorough revision, but the numbering has been left unchanged, except at a very few points. It is intended to include all the grammatical material which need be put into the hands of a class for second year work. The regular paradigms are given in full, with only such exceptional forms as are needed for the reading of Caesar and Cicero. Rules of syntax are almost invariably stated in full, so that when the student takes up a more complete grammar he will have to master only the exceptions, not the principles.

The examples are drawn chiefly from Caesar, especially the first half of the first book. Some are made up, for the sake of brevity and clearness, and a few are taken from Cicero. References like I, 14, 3 indicate the book, chapter, and line of Caesar.

The writer has consulted the usual authorities, and is under special obligations, as regards the treatment of the verb, to the writings and personal instruction of Professor William Gardner Hale. He has received much assistance in revising the work from the thoughtful and practical suggestions of Messrs. Janes and Jenks of the Boys' High School, Brooklyn, N. Y.

PRONUNCIATION

QUANTITY OF VOWELS

1. A vowel is usually short:

a. Before another vowel, or h; as eō, nihil.

b. Before nd and nt; as laudandus, laudant.

c. In words of more than one syllable, before any other final consonant than s; as laudem, laudat.

2. A vowel is long:

a. Before nf, ns, nx, and nct; as īnferō, cōnsul, iūnxī, iūnctum.

b. When it results from contraction; as īsset, for iisset.

3. A vowel is usually long:

a. In monosyllables not ending in b, d, l, m, or t; as mē, hīc, but ab, ad.

SOUNDS OF VOWELS

4. Long vowels, whether accented or not, should be given twice the time given to short vowels. This is the chief difficulty in the Roman pronunciation, because in English only accented syllables are commonly given more time than others.

a = a in Cuba		ā = ah!
e = e in net		ē = e in they
i = i in pin		ī = i in machine
o = o in for (not as in got)		ō = oh!
u = oo in foot		ū = oo in boot

SOUNDS OF DIPHTHONGS

5. The following are the commonly recognized diphthongs which appear in classical Latin:

ae = ai in aisle
au = ow in how

eu has no English equivalent. Run together in one syllable the sounds eh'-oo.

ui has no English equivalent. Run together in one syllable the sounds oo'-ee. The diphthong appears in cui, huic, cuius, and huius.

a. When the consonant i (= j) stands between two vowels, as in maior, eius, Troia, and cuius, though i was written only once it was pronounced twice, as if the spelling were, maiior, eiius, Troiia, and cuiius. The second i is the consonant, pronounced like y in yet.

The first i makes a diphthong with the preceding vowel. In such cases, ai = ai in aisle

ui as indicated above.

SOUNDS OF CONSONANTS

6. The consonants are, in general, pronounced as in English; but the following points should be noted:

c and g are always hard, as in can, go
i (consonant, sometimes printed j) = y in yet n before c, g, q, and x = ng in sing
r pronounced distinctly s as in this, never as in these t as in tin, never as in nation
v = w
x = ks
ch, ph, th = c, p, t bs, bt = ps, pt
qu = qu in quart
ngu = ngu in anguish
su = sw in suādeō, suāvis, suēscō, and their compounds.

a. When consonants are doubled, as in mittō, annus, both consonants should be sounded, as they are in out-talk, pen-knife. We sound only one consonant in ditty, penny.

7. i is generally a consonant between vowels, and at the beginning of a word before a vowel. In compounds of iaciō, the form iciō was written. It is commonly believed that in these words consonant i was pronounced, though not written, before vowel i; as dēiciō, pronounced as if dēiiciō; abiciō, as if abiiciō.

SYLLABLES

8. Every Latin word has as many syllables as it has vowels or diphthongs.

a. A single consonant between two vowels is pronounced with the second vowel; as fe-rō, a-gō, mo-nē.

b. The combination of a mute and a liquid (b, c, d, g, p, t, ch, ph, or th, followed by l or r) is pronounced together so easily that it goes with the second vowel like a single consonant; as pa-tris, a-grī. But in poetry such a combination was often divided; as pat-ris, ag-rī.

c. Any other combination of two or more consonants is divided before the last consonant, or before the combination of a mute and a liquid; as mit-tō, dic-tus, magis-ter, magis-trī.

QUANTITY OF SYLLABLES

9. A syllable is long:

a. If it contains a long vowel or diphthong; as both syllables of laudō, and the first syllable of eius (5, a).

b. If its vowel is followed by any two consonants except a mute and a liquid, or by one of the double consonants x and z. The quantity of a short vowel is not changed by this position: est is est, not ēst. The time taken in pronouncing a consonant at the end of the syllable before the consonant at the beginning of the next syllable (8, c) lengthens the syllable. This will be felt if the consonants are pronounced distinctly in mit-tō (6, a), an-nus, dic-tus, par-tēs, nos-ter.

c. Often in poetry when a short vowel is followed by a mute and a liquid. The pronunciation is then pat-ris, ag-rī (8, b). In prose such a syllable is always considered short.

ACCENT

10. Words of two syllables are accented on the first syllable; as om'nis.

11. Words of more than two syllables are accented on the penult if it is long, otherwise on the antepenult; as dīvī' sa, appel' lō, in' colunt.

12. When an enclitic is joined to another word, the accent falls on the syllable immediately preceding the enclitic; as Gallia'que.

INFLECTIONS

GENERAL RULES OF GENDER

13. The gender of most nouns is determined by the nominative ending or must be learned for the individual words; but the following rules will prove helpful.

a. The names of male beings, rivers, winds, and months are masculine.

b The names of female beings, countries, towns, islands, plants, trees, and of most abstract qualities are feminine.

c. Indeclinable nouns, and infinitives, phrases, and clauses used as nouns are neuter.

DECLENSIONS

14. There are five declensions of Latin nouns, distinguished from each other by the final letter of the stem, and the ending of the genitive singular.

DECLENSION	FINAL LETTER OF STEM	ENDING OF GEN. SING.
I.	ā	-ae
II.	o	-ī
III.	{ consonant { i	-is
IV.	u	-ūs
V.	ē	-ēī or -eī

a. Strictly speaking, the cases are usually formed by adding case-endings to the stem. But when the stem ends in a vowel, that vowel is often modified in some way, or is so combined with the true case-ending that neither the stem-vowel nor the true case-ending can be seen. Therefore it is more convenient to apply the name case-ending to the combined stem-vowel and true case-ending, and to say that the cases are formed by adding case-endings to the base. The base of a noun is found by dropping the ending of the genitive singular.

FIRST DECLENSION

15. The stem ends in -ā; the nominative in -a. The gender is usually feminine.

	SINGULAR	ENDINGS
Nominative	lingua	a language (as subject) -a
Genitive	linguae	of a language, language's -ae
Dative	linguae	to or for a language -ae
Accusative	linguam	a language (as object) -am
Vocative	lingua	O (or thou) language -a
Ablative	linguā	by, from, in, or with a language -ā

PLURAL

Nominative	linguae	languages (as subject)	-ae
Genitive	linguārum	of languages, languages'	-ārum
Dative	linguīs	to or for languages	-īs
Accusative	linguās	languages (as object)	-ās
Vocative	linguae	O (or ye) languages	-ae
Ablative	linguīs	by, from, in, or with languages	-īs

a. Exceptions in gender are shown by meanings (13); as Belgae, M., the Belgae; Matrona, M., the (river) Marne.

b. The locative singular ends in -ae; as Samarobrīvae, at Samarobriva.

SECOND DECLENSION

16. The stem ends in -o; the nominative masculine in -us, -er, -ir; the nominative neuter in -um.

	animus, M., mind	puer, M., boy	ager, M., field	vir, M., man	bellum, N., war

B. i-STEMS

24. Here belong (1) masculine and feminine nouns ending in -is or -ēs if they have the same number of syllables in the genitive as in the nominative, and (2) neuters in -e, -al, -ar.

25. Theoretically the i should appear in all cases except the nominative and vocative plural of masculines and feminines, and the nominative, accusative, and vocative singular of some neuters; but this declension became confused with that of consonant stems, and no absolute rule can be given for the endings. Masculine and feminine nouns usually have acc., -em, abl., -e, acc. plural either -ēs or -īs. Neuters have abl. -ī.

C. MIXED STEMS

26. Some consonant stems have borrowed from -i stems the genitive plural in -ium and the accusative plural in -īs. Here belong most monosyllables in -s and -x preceded by a consonant; most nouns in -ns and -rs; and a few nouns in -tās, -tātis.

28. The gender of many nouns is shown by the meaning (13). There are numerous exceptions to the following rules.

a. Masculine are nouns in ō (except those in -dō, -gō, -iō) -or, -ōs, -er, -es.

b. Feminine are nouns in -dō, -gō, -iō, -ās, -ēs, -is, -ūs, -ys, -x, and in -s when preceded by a consonant.

c. Neuter are all others; namely, nouns in -a, -e, -ī, -y, -c, -l, -n, -t, -ar, -ur, -us.

a. Diēs in the singular is either masculine or feminine (feminine usually in the sense of an appointed day or a long space of time); in the plural it is masculine. Its compounds are masculine.

b. The ending of the genitive and dative singular is -ēī after a vowel, -eī after a consonant. -ē is sometimes used instead of either.

c. Diēs and rēs are the only nouns of this declension that are declined throughout the plural. Aciēs, spēs, and a few others have nominative and accusative plural forms.

ADJECTIVES WITH GENITIVE IN -īus.

a. Here belong most adjectives of one termination, and all participles in -āns and -ēns. Participles usually have the ablative singular in -ī only when used as adjectives, in -ē when used as participles or nouns.

COMPARISON OF ADJECTIVES

39. The regular comparative endings are -ior, -ius; superlative, -issimus, -a, -um. They are added to the base of the positive (found by removing the case-ending from the genitive singular). Examples: altus, high; altior, -ius. higher; altissimus, -a, -um, highest; fortis, brave; fortior, braver; fortissimus, bravest.

40. Adjectives in -er form the comparative regularly, but form the superlative by adding -rimus to the nominative of the positive. Example: ācer, sharp (base, ācr-), ācrior, ācerrimus.

41. Most adjectives in -ilis are compared regularly. Six, while forming the comparative regularly, form the superlative by adding -limus to the base of the positive. They are facilis, easy; difficilis, difficult; similis, like; dissimilis, unlike; humilis, low; gracilis, slender. Example: facilis, facilior, facillimus.

42. IRREGULAR COMPARISON

bonus, melior, optimus, good, better, best.
malus, peior, pessimus, bad, worse, worst.
magnus, maior, maximus, great, greater, greatest.
multus, plūs, plūrimus, much, more, most.
dexter, dexterior, dextimus, on the right, dexterous, etc.

DEFECTIVE COMPARISON

43. The following comparatives and superlatives appear without a positive because formed from stems not used as adjectives:

(dē, prep., down) dēterior, dēterrimus, worse, worst.
(intrā, prep., in, within) interior, intimus, inner, inmost.
(prae, prep., before) prior, prīmus, former, first.
(ultrā, adv., beyond) ulterior, ultimus, farther, farthest.

44. Of the following the positive forms are rare, except when used as nouns (generally in the plural):

exterus, exterior, extrēmus (extimus), outer, outmost.
īnferus, īnferior, īnfimus (īmus), lower, lowest.
posterus, posterior, postrēmus (postumus), latter, last.
superus, superior, suprēmus (summus), higher, highest.

COMPARISON BY ADVERBS

45. Most adjectives in -us preceded by a vowel, and many others, form the comparative and superlative by using the adverbs magis, more, and maximē, most. Example: idōneus, suitable; magis idōneus, more suitable; maximē idōneus, most suitable.

COMPARISON OF ADVERBS

46. Most adverbs are formed from adjectives in all the degrees of comparison.

a. The positive is formed from adjectives of the first and second declensions by adding -ē to the base; as lātus, wide, lātē, widely: from adjectives of the third declension by adding -ter or -iter to the base, except that adjectives whose base ends in nt add only -er; as audāx, audācis, bold, audācter, boldly; fortis, brave, fortiter, bravely; prūdēns, prūdentis, prudent, prūdenter, prudently. But the neuter accusative singular of adjectives of all declensions may be used adverbially; as multum, much, facile, easily.

b. The comparative is the accusative singular neuter of the comparative of the adjective; as lātius, more widely, audācius, more boldly, fortius, more bravely, prūdentius, more prudently, plūs, more, facilius, more easily.

c. The superlative is formed by adding -ē to the base of the superlative of the adjective; or, less often, is its accusative singular neuter; as lātissimē, most widely, audācissimē, most boldly, fortissimē, most bravely, prūdentissimē, most prudently, plūrimum, most, facillimē, most easily.

NUMERALS

47. Numeral adjectives are of three classes: cardinals, answering the question how many? as one, two, etc.; ordinals, answering the question which in order? as, first, second, etc.; and distributives, answering the question how many each? as, one each, two each, etc.

a. The ending -ēnsimus is often used for -ēsimus.

48. Of the cardinals, ūnus, duo, and trēs are declined; quattuor to centum, inclusive, are indeclinable; ducentī to nōngentī, inclusive, are declined like the plural of magnus (31); mīlle as an adjective is indeclinable, as a substantive is declined like the plural of cubīle (25) and generally spelled mīlia. Ordinals are declined like magnus, distributives like the plural of magnus.

49. For the declension of ūnus see 32. Its plural usually means only or alone, but is used in the sense of one with nouns used only in the plural; as, ūna castra, one camp. Duo and trēs are declined as follows:

	duo, two		trēs, three
Mas.	Fem.	Neut.	M. and F.	Neut.
N. duo	duae	duo	trēs	tria

50. The numbers intermediate between those given in the table are expressed as follows: In a combination of tens and units the units may precede, followed by et; as trēs et quadrāgintā, three and forty; or the tens may precede without an et; as quadrāgintā trēs, forty three In other combinations of two numerals the higher precedes, with or without et; as ducentī (et) vīgintī, two hundred and twenty. In combinations of three or more numerals, the order is as in English, without et; as duo mīlia sescentī vīgintī sex, two thousand six hundred and twenty six.

A.	mē	nōs	tē	vōs
A.	mē	nōbīs	tē	vōbīs

a. There is no personal pronoun of the third person. Its place is taken either by a demonstrative pronoun, usually is, he, ea, she, id, it, 57; or, when him, them, etc., refer to the subject (163), by the reflexive pronouns.

b. nostrum and vestrum are the forms used as partitive genitives (101); nostrī and vestrī, as objective genitives (98).

c. The preposition cum is enclitic with personal pronouns; as, nōbīscum, with us.

REFLEXIVE PRONOUNS

52. A reflexive pronoun can neither be the subject of a finite verb nor agree with such a subject: therefore there can be no nominative. For the first and second persons the personal pronouns are used as reflexives. For the third person there is a special pronoun.

	First person, meī, of myself		Second person, tuī, of yourself		Third person, suī, of himself, etc.

VERBS

63. There are four conjugations of Latin verbs, distinguished from one another by the final vowel of the stem, best seen in the present infinitive.

CONJUGATION	FINAL VOWEL OF STEM	PRESENT INFINITIVE
I.	ā	-āre
II.	ē	-ēre
III.	e (i, u)	-ere
IV.	ī	-īre

64. All forms of a verb are formed on one or another of three stems,—the present stem, the perfect stem, and the supine stem. In regular verbs the perfect and supine stems are based on the present stem, but in some irregular verbs they are formed on distinct roots.

a. On the present stem are formed: active and passive,—present, imperfect, and future indicative; present and imperfect subjunctive; imperative; present infinitive: active,—present participle; gerund: passive,—gerundive.

b On the perfect stem are formed: active,—perfect, pluperfect, and future perfect indicative; perfect and pluperfect subjunctive; perfect infinitive.

c. On the supine stem are formed: active and passive,—future infinitive; active,—future participle; supine: passive,—perfect, pluperfect, and future perfect indicative; perfect and pluperfect subjunctive; perfect infinitive; perfect participle.

65. The principal parts are forms which show to which conjugation a verb belongs and what each of its stems is. They are, in the active, (1) the first person singular present indicative (as the first form of the verb), (2) the present infinitive (to indicate the conjugation and give the present stem), (3) the first person singular perfect indicative (to give the perfect stem), (4) the supine (to give the supine stem).

For example, the principal parts of laudō are:

laudō, laudāre (present stem, laudā).
laudāvī (perfect stem, laudāv).
laudātum (supine stem, laudāt).

The supine of the majority of verbs is not found in Latin literature so that other forms of the verb are often given instead of the supine. But no one form is found for every verb, and it is simpler to give the supine always.

In the passive the principal parts are (1) the first person singular present indicative, (2) the present infinitive, (3) the first person singular perfect indicative.

CONTRACTED FORMS

72. When the perfect stem ends in v, the v is sometimes dropped, and usually the two vowels thus brought together contract into one. a. Perfects in -āvī, -ēvī, and -ōvī, and the other tenses based on the same stem, sometimes (apparently) drop ve, vē, or vi before r or s.

Examples: laudāstī for laudāvistī; laudāsse for laudāvisse; dēlērunt for dēlēvērunt; nōrim for nōverim.

b. Perfects in -īvī, and the other tenses based on the same stem, sometimes drop v in all forms. When the resulting combination is iis it usually contracts to īs.

Examples: audiī for audīvī; audieram for audīveram; audīsse for audīvisse

DEPONENT VERBS

73. Deponent verbs have passive forms with active meanings. But the future passive participle is passive in sense, and the perfect participle is sometimes so. On the other hand they have the following active forms: future infinitive, present and future participles, gerund, supine.

Of the following verbs the principal parts, indicative, subjunctive, and imperative are precisely the same as those for the passive voice of the verbs already given for the corresponding conjugations.

74. SEMI-DEPONENT VERBS

Semi-deponent verbs have active forms for the tenses based on the present stem, passive forms for those based on the perfect stem.

They are:

audeō, audēre, ausus sum, dare gaudeō, gaudēre, gāvīsus sum, rejoice soleō, solēre, solitus sum, be accustomed

PERIPHRASTIC CONJUGATION

75. The active periphrastic conjugation expresses future or intended action. It is formed by combining the future active participle with the verb sum: thus,

Pres. laudātūrus sum, I am about to praise, I intend to praise,
Imp. laudātūrus eram, I was about to praise, I intended to praise, etc.

76. The passive periphrastic conjugation expresses obligation or necessity. It is formed by combining the future passive participle with the verb sum: thus,

Pres. laudandus sum, I am to be (must be) praised, I have to be praised.
Imp. laudandus eram, I was to be praised, I had to be praised, etc.

IRREGULAR VERBS

SUM AND ITS COMPOUNDS

77. For the conjugation of sum see 66. Sum is inflected in the same way when compounded with the prepositions ad, dē, in, inter, ob, prae, sub, super. Praesum has a present participle, praesēns.

78. In absum, sum is inflected in the same way, but ā is used for ab before f, giving āfuī, āfutūrus, etc. There is a present participle absēns.

79. In prōsum, sum is inflected in the same way, but the preposition prō has its original form prōd before all forms of sum beginning with e; as, prōdesse, prōderam. The present tense is, prōsum, prōdes, prōdest, prōsumus, prōdestis, prōsunt.

86. DEFECTIVE VERBS

The most important of these are the perfects meminī, I remember; ōdī, I hate; and coepī, I have begun. Notice that meminī and ōdī have the meanings of presents. Their pluperfects and future perfects have the meanings of imperfects and futures.

a. Instead of coepī the passive form coeptus sum is regularly used when a passive infinitive depends on it. Example: laudārī coeptus est, he began to be praised.

87. IMPERSONAL VERBS

Impersonal verbs correspond to English impersonals with it. They have no personal subject, but most of them take as subject a substantive clause or sometimes a neuter pronoun. They appear only in the third person singular of the indicative and subjunctive tenses, the present and perfect infinitives, and occasionally in the participles and gerund. They are:—

a. Most verbs expressing actions of nature; as pluit, it rains.

b. The following, which are exclusively impersonal: decet, it becomes; libet, it pleases; licet, it is permitted; miseret, it causes pity; oportet, it is right; paenitet, it repents; piget, it displeases; pudet, it shames; rēfert, it concerns; taedet, it wearies. All of these except rēfert belong to the second conjugation.

c. Personal verbs used impersonally with a special meaning; as accēdit, it is added, from accēdō, I approach.

d. The passives of most intransitive verbs; as pugnātur, it is fought.

SENTENCES

88. A sentence is a group of words so related as to express a complete thought. It consists of at least two parts — the subject (that of which something is said), and the predicate (that which is said about the subject). These two essential parts may be modified in various ways. A sentence may consist of a single verb, because the subject is implied in its ending.

Sentences are declarative, interrogative, imperative, or exclamatory as in English.

89. A Simple Sentence has one subject and one predicate. Example: Caesar vēnit, Caesar came.

90. A Compound Sentence consists of two or more simple sentences of equal value. These sentences are called coordinate clauses, and are connected by coordinating conjunctions; i. e., by conjunctions with such meanings as and, but, for, or. Example: Caesar vēnit et Gallī fūgērunt, Caesar came and the Gauls fled.

91. A Complex Sentence consists of a simple sentence (called a principal clause), modified by one or more dependent sentences (called subordinate or dependent clauses). The clauses are connected by relative pronouns or by subordinating conjunctions; i. e., by conjunctions with such meanings as in order that, so that, if, because, although, when, after, before. Example: ubi Caesar vēnit, Gallī fūgērunt, when Caesar came, the Gauls fled.

THE FUNCTION OF CASES

92. The cases help to show in what relation to the rest of a sentence any given substantive stands. This is shown in English almost entirely by the order of words or by the use of prepositions; yet the so-called possessive case illustrates the use of the Latin cases, for the ending 's in the soldier's arms indicates that soldier modifies arms and that the soldier is the possessor of the arms. But in the English sentences the soldier (subject) fights, he kills the soldier (direct object), he gives the soldier (indirect object) a sword, only the order of words shows the relation of the word to the rest of the sentence; while in Latin mīles would be used in the first sentence, mīlitem in the second, and mīlitī in the third.

93. But each of the cases, except the nominative and the vocative, expresses more than one thing. Consequently one must know just what uses each case can have, and must then determine which one of these uses it has in the sentence in which it occurs. This can be determined sometimes by the meaning of the word itself, sometimes by the obvious meaning of the sentence, sometimes by the fact that another word needs a certain case to satisfy its meaning and that case appeârs but once in the sentence. Examples: the accusative may express duration of time, but mīlitem, a soldier, could not be used in this sense, while multōs annōs, many years, is quite probably so used. Dīcit pīlum mīlitem vulnerāvisse might mean either he says that a javelin wounded the soldier, or a soldier wounded the javelin, but the latter makes no sense. Persuāsit, he persuaded, needs a dative to express the person persuaded, and if there is but one dative in the sentence its use is evident.

94. For further clearness many relations are expressed in Latin by prepositions, though not so many as in English. Examples: ā mīlite interfectus est, he was killed by a soldier; cum mīlite vēnit, he came in company with a soldier.

95. AGREEMENT OF SUBSTANTIVES

RULE: A noun which explains another noun and means the same person or thing is put in the same case.

Compare 97. Such a noun may be either a predicate noun or an appositive.

a. RULE: A predicate noun is connected with the subject by sum or a verb of similar meaning.

Such verbs are those meaning appear, become, seem, be called, be chosen, be regarded, and the like. Examples: Pīsō fuit cōnsul, Piso was consul; Pīsō factus est cōnsul, Piso became consul; Pīsō appellātus est cōnsul, Piso was called consul. For the predicate accusative with verbs of calling, etc., see 126.

b. RULE: An appositive is set beside the noun which it explains, without a connecting verb.

EXAMPLES: Pīsō, cōnsul, mīlitī Pīsōnī gladium dedit. Piso, the consul, gave a sword to Piso, the soldier.

96. NOMINATIVE

RULE: The nominative is used as the subject of a finite verb (i. e. the indicative, subjunctive, and imperative modes).

EXAMPLE: Gallia est dīvīsa (I, 1, 1), Gaul is divided.

GENITIVE

A. GENITIVE WITH NOUNS

97. GENERAL RULE: A noun which explains or limits another noun and does not mean the same person or thing (compare 95) is put in the genitive.

The relation between the two nouns is usually expressed in English by of, but often by for or by other prepositions. These combinations of nouns are divided, according to their meanings into the groups given in 98–105.

A genitive may be either (a) attributive, depending directly upon another noun; as domus Caesaris, Caesar's house; or (b) predicative, connected by sum or a verb of similar meaning; as domus est Caesaris, the house is Caesar's.

a. Appositional Genitive. But the genitive is sometimes used instead of an appositive; i. e., it sometimes means the same person or thing as the noun on which it depends. Example: tuōrum comitum sentīna (Cic. Cat. I, 12), that refuse, your comrades.

ATTRIBUTIVE

98. Subjective and Objective Genitives. These depend on nouns which have corresponding verbal ideas, as amor, love, amō, I love. The thought expressed by the noun and limiting genitive can be expanded into a sentence. If the genitive then becomes the subject it is a subjective genitive; if it becomes the object it is an objective genitive. Examples: amor patris, the love of the father, may imply that the father loves, (subjective), or that some one loves his father (objective); occāsum sōlis (Ï, 1, 22), the setting of the sun (subjective); rēgnī cupiditāte (I, 2, 2), by desire for power (objective).

99. Possessive Genitive.

RULE: The genitive may express the possessor.

The possessive pronouns are regularly used instead of the possessive genitive of personal pronouns. Examples: fīnibus Belgārum (I, 1, 16), by the territory of the Belgae; fīnibus vestrīs, by your territory.

a. A genitive or possessive pronoun must precede causā or grātiā, for the sake of. Examples: huius potentiae causā (I, 18, 14), for the sake of this power; meā causā, for my sake.

100. Descriptive Genitive.

RULE: The genitive modified by an adjective may describe a person or thing by naming some quality.

Compare the descriptive ablative (141). This genitive is regularly used to express measure. Examples: huiusce modī senātūs cōnsultum (Cic. Cat. I, 4), a decree of this kind; trium mēnsium molita cibāria (I, 5, 7), provisions for three months.

101. Partitive Genitive (Genitive of the Whole).

RULE: The genitive may express the whole of which a part is mentioned.

This genitive may depend on any substantive, adjective, pronoun, or adverb which implies a part of a whole. Examples: eōrum ūna pars (I, 1, 15), one part of them; hōrum omnium fortissimī (I, 1, 6), the bravest of all these; ubinam gentium sumus (Cic. Cat. I, 9), where in (not of) the world are we?

a. Note especially the genitive of a noun, or of the neuter singular of a second declension adjective used substantively, depending on a neuter singular adjective or pronoun or on satis used substantively. Examples: quantum bonī (I, 40, 17), how much (of) good; satis causae (I, 19, 6), sufficient (of) reason.

b. In place of this genitive the ablative with dē or ex is often used, especially with cardinal numerals and with quīdam. Example: ūnus ē fīliīs captus est (I, 26, 12), one of his sons was captured.

c. English often uses of in apparently similar phrases when there is really no partitive idea. Latin does not then use the genitive. Example: hī omnēs (I, 1, 3), all of these.

102. Genitive of Material.

RULE: The genitive may express the material of which a thing is composed.

Example: aciem legiōnum quattuor (I, 24, 3), a battle line (consisting) of four legions.

Predicative

103. Possessive Genitive. The possessive genitive (99) is often used predicatively. Note especially such phrases as est hominis, it is the part (duty, characteristic) of a man. Example: est hoc Gallicae cōnsuētūdinis (IV, 5, 4), this is a characteristic of the Gallic customs.

104. Descriptive Genitive. The descriptive genitive (100) is often used predicatively. Example: senātūs cōnsultum est huiusce modī, the decree is of this kind.

105. The Genitive of Value. With sum and verbs of similar meaning, and with verbs of valuing, indefinite value is expressed by the genitive. Compare the ablative of price (147). The words commonly so used are magnī, parvī, tantī, quantī, plūris, minōris. Example: tantī eius grātiam esse ostendit (I, 20, 14), he assured him that his friendship was of such value.

B. GENITIVE WITH ADJECTIVES

106. RULE: Many adjectives take a genitive to complete their meaning. They are:

a. Regularly, adjectives with such meanings as conscious (of), desirous (of), mindful (of), sharing (in), skilled (in), and their opposites, and plēnus, full (of). Examples: bellandī cupidī (I, 2, 13), desirous of fighting; reī mīlitāris perītissimus (I, 21, 9), most skilled in military science.

b. Sometimes with the genitive, sometimes with the dative (122), similis, like; dissimilis, unlike. The genitive is more common of living objects, and regular of personal pronouns. Example: tuī similis (Cic. Cat. I, 5), like you; vērī simile (III, 13, 11), probable (like the truth).

c. Occasionally other adjectives. Example: locum medium utrīusque (I, 34, 2), a place midway between them.

C. GENITIVE WITH VERBS

107. Verbs of Remembering and Forgetting.

RULE: Meminī, bear in mind, reminīscor, remember, and oblīvīscor, forget, govern either the genitive or the accusative.

The genitive is regular of persons, the accusative of neuter pronouns. Examples: reminīscerētur veteris incommodī (I, 13, 11), he should remember the former disaster; veteris contumēliae oblīvīscī (I, 14, 7), to forget the former insult.

108. Verbs of Judicial Action.

RULE: Verbs of accusing, acquitting, convicting, and condemning take a genitive of the charge.

The penalty is expressed by the ablative. Example: mē inertiae condemnō (Cic. Cat. I, 4), I pronounce myself guilty of inactivity.

109. Verbs of Emotion.

RULE: The impersonal verbs miseret, pity, paenitet, repent, piget, dislike, pudet, be ashamed, taedet, be disgusted, take the genitive of the person or thing which causes the feeling, and the accusative of the person who has the feeling.

The personal verb misereor, pity, also takes the genitive. Examples: mē meōrum factōrum numquam paenitēbit (Cic. Cat. IV, 20), I shall never repent of my deeds; mē eius miseret or eius misereor, I pity him.

110. Interest and Rēfert.

RULE: The impersonal verbs interest and rēfert, it concerns, it is to the interest of, take the genitive of the person concerned.

But if the person is expressed in English by a personal pronoun, interest is used with the ablative singular feminine of a possessive pronoun. Examples: reī pūblicae intersit (II, 5, 5), it is to the interest of the state; meā interest, it is to my interest.

111. RULE: Potior occasionally governs the genitive.

For potior with the ablative see 145. Example: Galliae potīrī (I, 3, 22), to become masters of Gaul.

THE DATIVE

112. The dative expresses that to or for which anything is or is done. It may depend on a verb or an adjective or, very rarely, a noun; or it may modify a whole sentence without depending on any one word.

113. Indirect Object.

GENERAL RULE: The dative denotes the person or thing indirectly affected by the action of a verb.

The indirect object depends closely on the verb, while the dative of reference (120) modifies the whole clause.

114. Indirect Object with Transitive Verbs.

RULE: Many verbs govern an indirect object in addition to a direct object.

These are especially verbs of giving and saying. The dative is usually translated by to, less often by for. For the indirect object with transitive verbs compounded with a preposition see 116. Example: eī fīliam dat (I, 3, 15), he gives (to) him his daughter.

a. Dōnō, give, present, and a few other verbs take either the dative of the person and the accusative of the thing, or the accusative of the person and the ablative of the thing. Examples: eī librum dōnō, I give (to) him a book; eum librō dōnō, I present him with a book.

b. Some verbs, instead of admitting both the accusative and the dative, admit either, but with a different meaning. Especially cōnsulō, consult or consult for, and metuō, fear or fear for. Examples: sī mē cōnsulis (Cic. Cat I, 13), if you consult me (ask my advice); cōnsulite vōbīs (Cic. Cat. IV, 3), consult for yourselves (for your own interests).

c. This dative is retained with the passive voice. Example: eī fīlia datur, his daughter is given to him.

115. Indirect Object with Intransitive Verbs. The dative is used with all intransitive verbs whose meaning permits. Many of these verbs seem to be transitive in English, so that the indirect object must be translated by the English direct object.

RULE: The dative (usually of the person) is used with many verbs meaning benefit or injure, command or obey, please or displease, serve or resist, trust or distrust, believe, envy, favor, pardon, persuade, spare, threaten, and the like.*

EXAMPLES: cīvitātī persuāsit (I, 2, 3), he persuaded the state; novīs rēbus studēbat (I, 9, 8), he was anxious for a revolution; Allobrogibus imperāvit (I, 28, 7), he commanded the Allobroges.

a. The dative is used with some phrases of similar meanings, as audiēns sum, obey, and fidem habēre, trust. Example: cui fidem habēbat (I, 19, 15), whom he trusted.

b. Many of these verbs which are ordinarily intransitive occasionally take an accusative of the thing, usually a neuter pronoun. Examples: prōvinciae mīlitum numerum imperat (I, 7, 4), he levies a number of soldiers on the province; id iīs persuāsit (I, 2, 6), he persuaded them to this (literally, he persuaded this to them).

c. Not all verbs with the meanings given above are intransitive. The most important exceptions are the verbs dēlectō, delight, iubeō command, iuvō, please, vetō, forbid, which are transitive and therefore take the accusative (124). Example: Labiēnum iubet (I, 21, 5), he commands Labienus.

d. Since only the direct object of the active voice becomes the subject of the passive (124, b), no intransitive verb can have a personal subject in the passive. The verbs of 115 can be used in the passive only impersonally, and the dative is retained, though it is usually translated as a subject. Examples: Caesarī persuādeō, I persuade Caesar, becomes Caesarī ā mē persuādētur, Caesar is persuaded by me (literally, it is persuaded to Caesar).

116. The Indirect Object with Compound Verbs. I. Certain prepositions usually give to verbs with which they are compounded a meaning which, in Latin idiom, requires the dative. If the simple verb is transitive the compound governs a direct object in addition to the indirect. The dative is variously translated with these verbs: when it is translated by from, it is sometimes called the dative of separation.

RULE: The dative is required with many compounds of ad, ante, con, dē, in, inter, ob, post, prae, prō, sub, super; and with some compounds of ab, circum, and ex.

EXAMPLES: cum omnibus praestārent (I, 2, 5), since they excelled all; fīnitimīs bellum īnferre (I, 2, 12), to make war upon their neighbors; mūnītiōnī Labiēnum praeficit (I, 10, 7), he puts Labienus in command of the works; scūtō mīlitī dētractō (II, 25, 13), having snatched a shield from a soldier.

II. RULE: The dative is used with compounds of satis and bene.

EXAMPLE: sī Haeduīs satisfaciant (I, 14, 19), if they should make restitution to the Haedui.

a. The meaning of the compound does not always permit the dative. Among the most important exceptions are the transitive verbs, aggredior, attack; incendō, burn; interficiō, kill; oppugnō, assault; but there are many others. Example: eōs aggressus (I, 12, 9), having attacked (or attacking) them.

b. Very often with these compounds the preposition is repeated, or some other preposition is used, governing its proper case, instead of the dative. So especially if place is designated, or if motion is expressed. Example: illum in equum intulit (VI, 30, 15), he put him on a horse.

c. The dative is retained with the passive. Example: mūnītiōnī Labiēnus praeficitur, Labienus is put in command of the works.

117. Dative of Possessor.

RULE: The dative is used in the predicate with sum to denote the possessor.

It may be translated as a nominative with the verb have. Examples: mihi est liber, I have a book (literally a book is to me); dēmonstrant sibi nihil esse (I, 11, 12), they declared that they had nothing (lit. there was nothing to them).

118. Dative of the Agent.

RULE: The dative is used with the passive periphrastic conjugation (76) to express the agent.

Compare the ablative of the agent (137), which is used with the other forms of the passive. Example: nōn exspectandum sibi statuit (Caes. I, 11, 13), he decided that he must not wait (lit. that it must not be waited by him).

a. The ablative of the agent (137) is often used with the passive periphrastic, especially if the dative would be ambiguous. Example: cīvitātī ā tē persuādendum est, the state must be persuaded by you.

119. Dative of Purpose.

RULE: The dative may express purpose or tendency.

This dative is especially common with sum. It is often found in connection with another dative (indirect object, dative of reference, dative of the possessor). Examples: quem auxiliō Caesarī mīserant (I, 18, 27), whom they had sent to aid Caesar, lit. whom they had sent for an aid to Caesar; quī novissimīs praesidiō erant (I, 25, 14), who were guarding the rear, lit. who were for a guard to the rear.

120. Dative of Reference.

RULE: The dative may name the person with reference to whom the statement is made.

This dative does not depend on any one word (compare 113) but loosely modifies the whole predicate. It often takes the place of a genitive modifying a noun. Examples: cibāria sibi quemque efferre iubent (I, 5, 8), they order each one to carry food for himself; sēsē Caesarī ad pedēs prōiēcērunt (I, 31, 4), they cast themselves at Caesar's feet.

121. Ethical Dative. The ethical dative is a dative of reference with so weak a meaning as to be unnecessary to the sense. It designates the person to whom the thought is of interest, and usually shows some emotion. Its use is confined to the personal pronouns. Example: Tongilium mihi ēdūxit (Cic. Cat. II, 4,), he took me out Tongilius, he took out my Tongilius, or simply he took out Tongilius.

122. Dative with Adjectives.

RULE: Adjectives meaning friendly or unfriendly, like or unlike, useful or useless, equal, fit, near, suitable, govern the dative.

Examples: plēbī acceptus (I, 3, 14), acceptable (pleasing) to the people; proximī sunt Germānīs (I, 1, 9), they are nearest to the Germans; castrīs idōneum locum (VI, 10, 5), a place suitable for a camp.

a. With some of these adjectives a preposition with its proper case is often used instead of a dative. Example: ad amīcitiam idōneus, suitable for friendship.

b. The adjectives propior and proximus and the adverbs propius and proximē sometimes govern the accusative, like the preposition prope. Example: proximī Rhēnum (I, 54, 3), nearest the Rhine.

c. For similis and dissimilis see 106, b.

ACCUSATIVE

123. Subject of Infinitive.

RULE: The accusative is used as the subject of the infinitive.

Example: certior factus est Helvētiōs trādūxisse (I, 12, 5), he was informed that the Helvetii had led across.

124. Direct Object.

RULE: The accusative is used with transitive verbs to express the direct object.

The direct object may be either (a) the person or thing directly affected by the action of the verb, as puerum laudat, he praises the boy; or (b) the thing produced by the action of the verb, as coniūrātiōnem fēcit, he made a conspiracy.

a. The direct object may be a substantive clause (228, 229, 262, 277).

b. The direct object of the active voice becomes the subject of the passive. Examples: puer laudātur, the boy is praised; coniūrātiō facta est, a conspiracy was made.

c. Many compounds of intransitive verbs with prepositions, especially ad, circum, in, per, praeter, sub, trāns, have transitive meanings. Example: īre, to go, intransitive; but flūmen trānsīre, to cross (go across) the river.

d. Many verbs which are transitive in English are intransitive in Latin; see especially 115.

THREE CLASSES OF VERBS GOVERNING TWO ACCUSATIVES (125–127).

125. Two Objects. A few verbs take two objects, one of the person, one of the thing.

a. RULE: Verbs of asking, demanding, and teaching, (also cēlō, I conceal) have a direct object of the thing, and may have another of the person.

But with verbs of asking and demanding the person is usually expressed by the ablative with ab. Examples: Haeduōs frūmentum flāgitāre (I, 16, 1), he kept asking the Haedui for the grain; eadem ab aliīs quaerit (I, 18, 5), he asked the same question of others.

b. RULE: Moneō, I warn, advise, and a few other verbs may take an accusative of the person and the neuter accusative of a pronoun or adjective of the thing.

The pronoun is an inner accusative (128, a). Examples: eōs hoc moneō (Cic. Cat. II, 20), I give them this advice; sī quid ille sē velit (I, 34, 6), if he wanted anything of him.

c. With the passive of these verbs the accusative of the person becomes the subject, and the accusative of the thing is retained. Example: Haeduī frūmentum flāgitābantur, the Haedui were asked for the grain; (iī) hoc monentur, they are given this advice.

126. Object and Predicate Accusative.

RULE: Verbs of making, choosing, calling, regarding, showing, and the like, take a direct object and a predicate accusative, both referring to the same person or thing.

The predicate accusative may be either a noun or an adjective. Examples: quem rēgem cōnstituerat (IV, 21, 14), whom he had appointed king; Caesarem certiōrem fēcit, he informed Caesar (made Caesar more certain).

a. With the passive of these verbs the direct object becomes the subject, and the predicate accusative becomes the predicate nominative (95, a). Examples: quī rēx cōnstitūtus erat, who had been appointed king; Caesar certior factus est (I, 12, 5), Caesar was informed (made more certain).

127. Two Objects with Compounds.

RULE: Transitive verbs compounded with trāns may take one object depending on the verb, another depending on the preposition.

Example: trēs partēs flūmen trādūxērunt (cf. I, 12, 6), they led three parts across the river.

a. With the passive of these verbs the object of the verb becomes the subject, the object of the preposition is retained. Example: trēs partēs flūmen trāductae sunt, three parts were led across the river.

128. Cognate Accusative.

RULE: An intransitive verb may take an accusative of a noun of kindred meaning, usually modified by an adjective or genitive.

Examples: eam vītam vīvere, to live that life; trīduī viam prōcēdere (I, 38), to advance a three days' march.

a. A neuter accusative of a pronoun or adjective is often used in a similar way. This is sometimes called an inner accusative. Examples: id iīs persuāsit (I, 2, 3), he persuaded them of this (lit. he persuaded this to them); multum posse, to have much power.

b. Adverbial Accusative. A few accusatives are used adverbially. In some cases it is impossible to decide whether an accusative should be classed here or under a. The most common adverbial accusatives are multum, much, plūs, more, plūrimum, most, plērumque, for the most part, and nihil, not at all. Here belong also id temporis (Cic. Cat. I, 10), at that time, and maximam partem (IV, 1, 14), for the most part. Example: multum sunt in vēnātiōne (IV, 1, 15), they engage much in hunting.

129. Accusative in Exclamations.

RULE: An accusative is sometimes used as an exclamation.

Example: O fortūnātam rem pūblicam (Cic. Cat. II, 7), Oh, fortunate state! The nominative and vocative are less often used in the same way.

130. Accusative of Time and Space.

RULE: The accusative is used to express duration of time and extent of space.*

The noun must be one meaning time or distance, as, diēs, day; pēs, foot. Compare 152 and 148. Examples: rēgnum multōs annōs obtinuerat (I, 3, 10), he had held the royal power many years; mīlia passuum ducenta quadrāgintā patēbant (I, 2, 16), extended two hundred and forty miles.

131. Place to Which.

RULE: Place to which is regularly expressed by the accusative with* ad or in, but names of towns and domus and rūs omit the preposition.

Compare 134, a, and 151. Examples: ad iūdicium coēgit (I, 4, 14), he brought to the trial; in agrum Nōricum trānsierant (I, 5, 11), they had crossed over into the Noreian territory; sē Massiliam cōnferet (Cic. Cat. II, 14), he will go to Marseilles; domum reditiōnis (I, 5, 6), of a return home.

a. Ad is, however, sometimes used in the sense of towards (not to), or in the neighborhood of. Example: ad Genavam pervenit (I, 7, 4), he reached the neighborhood of Geneva.

132. VOCATIVE

The name of the person addressed is put in the vocative. Example: dēsilīte, commīlitōnēs (IV, 25, 11), jump down, comrades.

133. ABLATIVE

The language from which Latin developed had two more cases than Latin has,—the instrumental and the locative. The original ablative meant separation (from), the instrumental meant association or instrument (with or by), and the locative meant place where (in). The forms of these three cases united in the Latin ablative; so that this one case has meanings which belonged to three separate cases. This fact accounts for the many and widely differing uses which the case has.

134. Ablative of Separation.

RULE: Separation is usually expressed by the ablative, with or without* ab, dē, or ex.

With some verbs both constructions are used; the individual usage of others must be noted. For the so-called dative of separation see 116, I. Examples: suīs fīnibus eōs prohibent (I, 1, 13), they repel them from their own territory; quae hostem ā pugnā prohibērent (IV, 34, 9), which kept the enemy from battle; ā Bibracte aberat (I, 23, 2), he was distant from Bibracte.

a. Place from which: with verbs expressing motion:—

RULE: Place from which is expressed by the ablative with* ab, dē, or ex, but names of towns and domus and rūs omit the preposition.

Compare 131 and 151. Examples: ut dē fīnibus suīs exīrent (I, 2, 4), to go out from their territory; quī ex prōvinciā convēnerant (I, 8, 2), who had gathered from the province; Rōmā profūgērunt (Cic. Cat. I, 7), they fled from Rome; domō exīre (I, 6, 1), to go out from home.

Ab is, however, used with names of towns to express from the neighborhood of.

b. RULE: With verbs and adjectives of depriving, freeing, being without, and the like, the ablative without a preposition is generally used.*

Examples: magnō mē metū līberābis (Cic. Cat. I, 10), you will free me of great fear; proeliō abstinēbat (I, 22, 11), refused battle (literally refrained from battle).

135. Ablative of Source.

RULE: The ablative, usually without a preposition, is used with the participles* nātus and ortus, to express parentage or rank.

Examples: amplissimō genere nātus (IV, 12, 13), born of the highest rank; sorōrem ex mātre (nātam) (I, 18, 16), his sister on his mother's side.

136. Ablative of Material.

RULE: The material of which anything is made is expressed by the ablative with* ex, less often dē.

Example: nāvēs factae ex rōbore (III, 13, 5), the ships were made of oak.

137. Ablative of Agent.

RULE: The agent of the passive voice is expressed by the ablative with* ab.

The agent is the person who performs the act. Compare the ablative of means (143), and the dative of agent (118). Example: exercitum ab Helvētiīs pulsum (I, 7, 13), that his army had been routed by the Helvetii.

138. Ablative of Cause.

RULE: Cause is expressed by the ablative, generally without a preposition.

Examples: grātiā et largītiōne (I, 9, 5), because of his popularity and lavish giving; quod suā victōriā glōriārentur (I, 14, 11), that they boasted (because) of their victory.

a. Cause is more frequently expressed by causā and the genitive (99, a); by the accusative with ob, per, or propter; and by dē or ex with the ablative. Examples: propter angustiās (I, 9, 2), because of its narrowness; quā dē causā, (I, 1, 11), and for this reason.

139. Ablative of Comparison.

RULE: With comparatives, "than" may be expressed by the ablative.

Examples: lūce sunt clāriōra tua cōnsilia (Cic. Cat. I, 6), your plans are clearer than day; nōn amplius quīnīs aut sēnīs mīlibus passuum (I, 15, 14), not more than five or six miles (compare b).

This is not to be confused with the ablative of measure of difference (148).

a. When quam is used for than, the two nouns compared are in the same case. The ablative is generally used only when the first noun is nominative or accusative, and when the sentence is negatived.

b. Plūs, minus, amplius, and longius are often used instead of plūs quam, etc. Example: quae amplius octingentae ūnō erant vīsae tempore (V, 8, 19), of which more than 800 had been in sight at one time.

140. Ablative of Accompaniment.

RULE: Accompaniment is expressed by the ablative with cum.

Example: ut cum omnibus cōpiīs exīrent (I, 2, 4), to go out with all their troops.

In military phrases cum is sometimes omitted.

Example: Caesar subsequēbātur omnibus cōpiīs (II, 19, 1), Caesar followed with all his troops.

141. Descriptive Ablative.

RULE: The ablative modified by an adjective may describe a person or thing by naming some quality.*

It may be used either attributively or predicatively. Compare the descriptive genitive (100). Examples: hominēs inimīcō animō (I, 7, 15), men of unfriendly disposition; nōndum bonō animō vidērentur (I, 6, 11), they did not yet seem (to be) well disposed (of a good spirit).

142. Ablative of Manner.

RULE: Manner is expressed by the ablative, usually with either* cum or a modifying adjective, rarely with both.

Examples: pars cum cruciātū necābātur (V, 45, 5), some were killed with torture; magnīs itineribus (I, 10, 8), by forced marches.

a. Ablative of Accordance.

RULE: In some common phrases the ablative means in accordance with.*

These are especially the following nouns, modified by either an adjective or a genitive,—cōnsuētūdine, iūre, iussū (iniussū), lēge, mōribus, sententiā, sponte, voluntāte. Examples: iniussū suō (I, 19, 4), without his orders; mōribus suīs (I, 4, 1), in accordance with their customs; suā voluntāte (I, 20, 11), in accordance with his wish.

b. Ablative of Attendant Circumstance.

RULE: Sometimes the ablative expresses situation or an attendant circumstance.*

Usually it is impossible to distinguish clearly such an ablative from the ordinary ablative of manner. Examples: imperiō populī Rōmānī (I, 18, 22), under the sovereignty of the Roman people; intervāllō pedum duōrum iungēbat (IV, 17, 9), he joined at a distance apart of two feet.

143. Ablative of Means.

RULE: The means or instrument by which a thing is done is expressed by the ablative without a preposition.*

Compare the ablative of the agent (137). Example: rēgnī cupiditāte inductus (I, 2, 2), influenced by the desire for royal power.

a. Notice the ablative with the following words,—verbs and adjectives of filling (except plēnus, 106); fīdō, cōnfīdō, trust in; nītor, rely upon; lacessō (proeliō), provoke (to battle); assuēfactus, assuētus, accustomed to; frētus, relying upon. Examples: nātūrā locī cōnfīdēbant (III, 9, 12), they trusted in the nature of the country; nūllō officiō assuēfactī (IV, 1, 17), accustomed to no obedience.

147. Ablative of the Way.

RULE: The road or way by which a person or thing goes is expressed by the ablative of means.

Examples: frūmentō quod flūmine Ararī nāvibus subvexerat (I, 16, 5), the grain which he had brought up (by way of) the Saone; eōdem itinere contendit (I, 21, 8), he advanced by the same road.

145. Ablative with Special Deponent Verbs. The ablative is used with ūtor, use, fruor, enjoy, fungor, perform, fulfill, potior, get possession of, vēscor, eat, and their compounds.

This is an ablative of means, but is to be translated by a direct object. Examples: eōdem ūsī cōnsiliō (I, 5, 9), adopting (having used) the same plan; imperiō potīrī (I, 2, 6), to get possession of the government.

146. Ablative with opus est.

RULE: The ablative of means is used with opus est and ūsus est, meaning there is need of.

Example: Caesarī multis auxiliīs opus est, Caesar needs many auxiliaries.

a. But if the thing needed is expressed by a neuter pronoun or adjective it may be used as the subject, with opus as predicate noun. Example: sī quid opus esset (I, 34, 5), if he needed anything.

b. Sometimes the ablative neuter of the perfect passive participle is used with opus est. Example: sī opus factō esset (I, 42, 19), if there should be need of action.

147. Ablative of Price.

RULE: With verbs of buying, selling, and the like, price is expressed by the ablative.

Compare the genitive of value, 105. Example: parvō pretiō redēmpta (I, 18, 9), bought up at a low price.

148. Ablative of Degree of Difference.

RULE: The ablative is used with comparatives and words of similar meaning to express the degree of difference.

Compare 139. Examples: nihilō minus (I, 5, 1), lit. less by nothing, = nevertheless; paucīs ante diēbus, (I, 18, 25), a few days before (lit. before by a few days).

a. Eō . . . quō, in this construction, may be translated the . . the. Example: eō gravius ferre quō minus meritō accidissent (I, 14, 3), lit. he endured them with more anger by that amount by which they had happened less deservedly, = he was the more angry the less deservedly they had happened.

149. Ablative of Specification.

RULE: The ablative is used to express that in respect to which a statement is true.

Examples: linguā inter sē differunt (I, 1, 3), they differ in language; maior nātū, older (greater in birth).

a. The ablative is used with dignus, worthy, and indignus, unworthy. Example: ipsīs indignum (V, 35, 11), unworthy of themselves.

150. Ablative Absolute.

RULE: A noun and a participle in the ablative may modify a sentence as a subordinate clause would.

RULE: Two nouns, or a noun and an adjective, may stand in the ablative absolute when the English would connect them by the word "being."

The construction is called absolute because it does not depend syntactically on anything in the sentence. It is used much more frequently than the nominative absolute in English; hence it should be translated in some other way. It is always possible to translate by a subordinate clause, but sometimes other translations are more convenient. Notice the translations of the following examples: (translated by active past participle) remōtis equīs proelium commīsit (I, 25, 2), having sent the horses away, he began the battle; (translated by prepositional phrase) M Messālā M. Pīsōne cōnsulibus (I, 2, 2), in the consulship of, etc.; eō dēprecātōre (I, 9, 4), by his mediation; (translated by subordinate clause) omnibus rēbus comparātīs diem dīcunt (I, 6, 13), when everything was ready they set a day; Sēquanīs invītīs īre nōn poterant (I, 9, 1), if the Sequani should refuse they could not go; monte occupātō nostrōs exspectābat (I, 22, 11), though he had occupied the mountain he waited for our men; (translated by coordinate clause) locīs superiōribus occupātīs . . . . conantur (I, 10, 12), they occupied advantageous positions and tried, etc.

151. Place in Which.

RULE: Place in which is regularly expressed by the ablative with in.

Compare 131 and 134, a. Example: in eōrum fīnibus bellum gerunt (I, 1, 13), they fight in their territory.

a. RULE: Names of towns and small islands stand in the locative (15, b; 16, b) if they are singular nouns of the first and second declensions; otherwise in the ablative without a preposition.

The locatives domī, at home, and rūrī, in the country, are also in regular use. Examples: Samarobrīvae (V, 24, 1), at Samarobriva; domī largiter posse (I, 18, 13), he had great influence at home.

b. RULE: No preposition is regularly used with locō, locīs, parte, partibus when accompanied by an adjective or an equivalent genitive; or with any noun modified by tōtus.

Examples: nōn nūllīs locīs trānsītur (I, 6, 8), is crossed in several places; vulgō tōtīs castrīs (I, 39, 17), everywhere throughout the entire camp.

c. Latin often uses some other construction where the English would lead one to expect the construction of place in which. So ab and ex are used to express position; and the ablative of means is often used instead of the ablative with in if the construction is at all appropriate. Examples: ūnā ex parte (I, 2, 7), on one side; cotīdiānīs proeliīs contendunt (I, 1, 12), they contend in (by means of) daily battles; memoriā tenēbat (I, 7, 12), he held in (by means of) memory.

152. Ablative of Time.

RULE: Time at or within which is expressed by the ablative without a preposition.

Compare the accusative of time (130). Examples: eō tempore (I, 3, 14), at that time; id quod ipsī diēbus vīgintī aegerrimē cōnfēcerant (I, 13, 4), a thing which they had barely accomplished in (within) twenty days.

a. The ablative rarely denotes duration of time. Example: eā tōtā nocte ierunt (I, 26, 13), they marched during that whole night.

CASES WITH PREPOSITIONS

153. Ablative. The following prepositions govern the ablative: ab, absque, cōram, cum, dē, ex, prae, prō, sine, tenus.

a. The forms ab and ex must be used before words beginning with a vowel or h. It is always safe to use ā and ē before words beginning with a consonant, though ab and ex are often found.

b. Cum is enclitic with the personal and reflexive pronouns, and usually with the relative and interrogative.

154. Accusative or Ablative. In and sub with the accusative imply motion from outside into and under, respectively. Subter and super sometimes govern the ablative.

155. Accusative. All other prepositions govern the accusative.

156. PREDICATE AND ATTRIBUTIVE ADJECTIVES

A predicate adjective is connected with its noun by some part of the verb sum or a verb of similar meaning (see 95, a); as, flūmen est lātum, the river is wide. An attributive adjective modifies its noun without such a connecting verb; as, flūmen lātum, the wide river.

157. AGREEMENT OF ADJECTIVES

RULE: Adjectives (including participles and adjective pronouns) agree with their nouns in gender, number, and case.

Examples: homō bonus, a good man; mulierī bonae, to a good woman; bellōrum magnōrum, of great wars.

a. An adjective which belongs in sense to two or more nouns,—

1. If attributive, regularly agrees with the nearest noun. Examples: vir bonus et mulier, a good man and woman; bella et victōriae magnae, great wars and victories.

2. If predicative, regularly agrees with all the nouns, and must, therefore, be plural. If the nouns are of the same gender the adjective usually takes that gender; otherwise it is neuter unless one or more of the nouns denote things with life, when the adjective is usually masculine rather than feminine, feminine rather than neuter. But the adjective may be neuter under almost any circumstances. Examples: hominēs et mōrēs sunt bonī, the men and their characters are good; hominēs et arma sunt magnī, the men and their arms are large; montēs et flūmina sunt magna, the mountains and rivers are large.

158. ADJECTIVES USED SUBSTANTIVELY

Adjectives are rarely used as substantives in the singular, more commonly in the plural. The masculine is used in all cases in the sense of man or men, and the feminine in the sense of woman or women. The neuter is used in the sense of thing or things, and commonly only in the nominative and accusative because they are the only cases in which masculine and neuter forms can be distinguished. But the genitive singular neuter is common as the partitive genitive (101, a). Examples: multī, many men; multōrum, of many men; multae, many women; multārum, of many women; multa, many things; multārum rērum, of many things.

159. ADJECTIVES FOR ADVERBS

Some adjectives are commonly used where the English idiom suggests the use of adverbs, chiefly when they modify the subject or object. Examples: invītus vēnit, lit. he came unwilling, = he came unwillingly or he was unwilling to come; prīmus vēnit, lit. he the first came, = he came first, or he was the first to come.

160. ADJECTIVES WITH PARTITIVE MEANING

Some adjectives mean only a part of an object. The most common of these are, īmus, īnfimus, the bottom of; medius, the middle of; summus, the top of; prīmus, the first part of; extrēmus, the last part of; reliquus, the rest of. Examples: in colle mediō (I, 24, 3), on the middle of (half way up) the slope; summus mōns (I, 22, 1), the top of the mountain; prīmā nocte (I, 27, 12), in the first part of the night; multō diē, late in the day.

161. COMPARATIVES AND SUPERLATIVES

Comparatives and superlatives of both adjectives and adverbs are usually to be translated by the corresponding English forms; but the comparative is sometimes to be translated by quite, rather, somewhat, or too, the superlative by very. Examples: diūturniōrem impūnitātem (I, 14, 15), quite long immunity; cupidius īnsecūtī (I, 15, 5), following too eagerly; monte Iūrā altissimō (I, 2, 9), by the very high mountain Jura.

a. The superlative is often strengthened by quam, with or without a form of possum. Examples: quam maximum numerum (I, 3, 3), quam maximum potest numerum (I, 7, 4), as great a number as possible, or the greatest possible number.

162. PERSONAL PRONOUNS

A personal pronoun (51) is rarely used as the subject of a finite verb except for emphasis or contrast. Example: ego maneō, tū abīs, I remain, you go.

a. The plural of the first person is more often used for the singular than in English. The plural of the second person is not used for the singular, as is done in English. Example: utī suprā dēmōnstrāvimus (II, 1, 1), as I (lit. we) have said before.

REFLEXIVE PRONOUNS

163. GENERAL RULE: Reflexive pronouns refer to the subject of the clause or sentence in which they stand.

They correspond to myself, himself, etc., in such sentences as I praise myself, he praises himself. This use of myself, etc., must not be confused with the use in such sentences as I myself praise him, where myself emphasizes I and is in apposition with it. The latter use corresponds to the Latin intensive pronoun (172). The reflexive of the third person has two uses.

164. The Direct Reflexive.

RULE: Suī and suus are used in every kind of sentence or clause to refer to the subject of the clause in which they stand.

Example: eum videō quī sē laudat, I see the man who praises himself.

165. The Indirect Reflexive.

RULE: In a subordinate clause which expresses the thought of the principal subject suī and suus are also used to refer to the principal subject instead of the subject of the clause in which they stand.

This is especially important in indirect discourse (271) where the whole indirect discourse expresses the thought of the speaker, and consequently every pronoun referring to the speaker is regularly some form of suī or suus. Example: Caesar dīcit mē sē laudāvisse, Caesar says that I praised him (Caesar).

166. The Reciprocal Expression. The reflexive pronouns are used with inter to express the reciprocal idea, one another, each other. Examples: inter nōs laudāmus, we praise one another or each other; obsidēs utī inter sēsē dent (I, 9, 10), that they give hostages to each other.

POSSESSIVE PRONOUNS

167. The possessive pronouns (or adjectives) are rarely expressed except for clearness or contrast. Example: Caesar exercitum dūxit, Caesar led (his) army.

a. Suus is the adjective of the reflexive pronoun suī, and is used in the same way. See 164 and 165.

DEMONSTRATIVE PRONOUNS

168. Hīc refers to something near the speaker, and is sometimes called the demonstrative of the first person. Example: hīc liber, this book (near me).

169. Iste refers to something near the person spoken to, and is sometimes called the demonstrative of the second person. Example: iste liber, that book (near you). When used of an opponent it often implies contempt.

170. Ille refers to something more remote from the speaker or person spoken to, and is often called the demonstrative of the third person. Example: ille liber, that book (yonder).

a. Ille and hīc are often used in the sense of the former, the latter. Hīc is usually the latter, as referring to the nearer of two things mentioned; but it may be the former if the former object is more important and therefore nearer in thought.

171. Is is the weakest of the demonstratives and the one most used as the personal pronoun of the third person, or to refer without emphasis to something just mentioned, or as the antecedent of a relative.

a. When is is used substantively it is translated by a personal pronoun; when used as an adjective, by this or that; when used as the antecedent of a relative it is translated in various ways,—the man, a man, such a man, that, etc.

THE INTENSIVE PRONOUN

172. Ipse emphasizes the noun with which it agrees. It is usually translated by self, and is not to be confused with the reflexive pronouns. Examples: ipse Caesar eum laudat, Caesar himself praises him; ipse Caesar sē laudat, Caesar himself praises himself.

a. Ipse is often used to strengthen a possessive pronoun. It then stands in the genitive to agree with the genitive implied in the possessive. Examples: meus ipsīus liber, my own book (the book of me myself); vester ipsōrum liber, your own book (the book of you yourselves).

THE RELATIVE PRONOUN

173. RULE: A relative pronoun agrees with its antecedent in gender and number, but its case depends on its construction in its own clause.

If it is used as subject the verb agrees in person with the antecedent. If the relative has two or more antecedents it follows the same rules of agreement as predicate adjectives (157, a, 2). The relative is never omitted. Examples: Caesar, quem laudō, Caesar, whom I praise; ego, quī eum laudō, I, who praise him; Caesar et Cicerō, quī mē laudant, Caesar and Cicero, who praise me.

a. Coordinate Relative. It is often necessary to translate a relative by a coordinating conjunction (and, but, etc.) and a personal or demonstrative pronoun. Example: relinquēbātur ūna via, quā īre nōn poterant (I, 9, 1), there was left only one way, and by it they could not go. Latin is fond of letting a relative stand at the beginning of an entirely new sentence, with its antecedent in the preceding sentence. It is then usually best translated by a personal or demonstrative pronoun. Example: quī (I, 15, 5), they.

INDEFINITE PRONOUNS

174. RULE: Quis, anyone, is the indefinite commonly used after sī, nisi, nē, and num.

Example: sī quis laudat, if anyone praises.

175. RULE: Aliquis (aliquī) is the indefinite commonly used in affirmative sentences to mean some one, some, etc.

Example: aliquis dīcat, some one may say.

176. Quispiam has almost exactly the same meaning as aliquis, but is rare. Example: quispiam dīcat, some one may say.

177. RULE: Quisquam and ūllus are the indefinites commonly used in negative sentences (except with nē), and in questions implying a negative, to mean any, anyone, etc.

Examples: neque quemquam laudō, nor do I praise anyone; cur quisquam iūdicāret (I, 40, 6), why should anyone suppose?

178. Nesciō quis (nesciō quī), originally meaning I know not who, is often used in a sense very much like that of aliquis, but with even more indefiniteness. Example: nesciō quis laudat, some one or other praises.

AGREEMENT OF VERB AND SUBJECT

179. RULE: A finite verb agrees with its subject in person and number.

In the compound tenses the participle agrees with the subject in gender. Examples: Caesar laudātus est, Caesar was praised; mulierēs laudātae sunt, the women were praised.

a. But the verb sometimes agrees with the meaning of the subject rather than its grammatical form. Thus a singular collective noun sometimes has a plural verb, and a neuter noun a masculine participle in agreement. Examples: multitūdō vēnērunt, a great number came; duo mīlia occīsī sunt, two thousand were killed.

180. If there are two or more subjects, the verb is usually plural. In the compound tenses of the passive the participle follows the rule given for predicate adjectives (157, a, 2). If the subjects differ in person the first person is preferred to the second and the second to the third. Examples: homō et mulier occīsī sunt, the man and the woman were killed; ego et tū vēnimus, you and I came.

a. The verb may agree with the nearest subject, especially if the verb stands first or after the first subject. It regularly does so if the subjects are connected by conjunctions meaning or or nor. Example: Caesar vēnit et Labiēnus, Caesar and Labienus came; neque Caesar neque Labiēnus vēnit, neither Caesar nor Labienus came; fīlia atque ūnus ē fīliīs captus est (I, 26, 11), his daughter and one of his sons were taken.

b. If the two or more subjects are thought of as forming a single whole, the verb is singular. Example: Matrona et Sēquana dīvidit (I, 1, 5), the Marne and Seine separate (they make one boundary line).

THE VOICES

181. The voices have the same meanings and uses as in English. An intransitive verb can not be used in the passive except impersonally. Examples: laudat, he praises; laudātur, he is praised; eī crēditur (115, d) lit. it is believed to him = he is believed.

THE MODES

182. The Latin verb has three modes,—the indicative, the subjunctive and the imperative. The name mode is applied to them because they indicate the manner in which the action of the verb is spoken of; for example, as a fact, as wished, as willed.

183. The Indicative speaks of the action as a fact, either stating a fact or asking a question about a fact. Examples: laudat, he praises; nōn laudat, he does not praise; laudatne? does he praise?

184. The Subjunctive has three classes of meanings, some of which may be further subdivided.

a. The Subjunctive of Desire. Both in independent sentences and in dependent clauses the subjunctive may express will (then called volitive) or wish (then called optative). Examples: laudet, let him praise or may he praise; imperō ut laudet, I command that he praise, i. e., I give the command "let him praise."

b. The Subjunctive of Contingent Futurity. Both in independent sentences and in dependent clauses the subjunctive may express what would take place under some condition, either expressed or implied, or, very seldom, it may express what may possibly take place. The latter use is the potential. Examples: laudet, he would praise (if there should be reason); is est quī laudet, he is a man who would praise.

c. The Subjunctive of Fact. Only in dependent clauses the subjunctive may express certainty and be translated like the indicative.

Example: laudātur cum laudet, he is praised because he praises. Compare laudātur quod laudat, he is praised because he praises.

185. The Imperative is used only in independent sentences. It expresses a command. Example: laudā, praise (thou); dēsilīte (IV, 25, 11), jump down.

OTHER VERBAL FORMS

186. The Infinitive is not, strictly speaking, a mode, but a verbal noun. It is, however, used as a mode in certain kinds of dependent clauses. Example: dīcit Caesarem laudārī, he says that Caesar is praised.

187. Verbal Nouns and Adjectives. The gerund and the supine are verbal nouns; the gerundive and the participles are verbal adjectives. None of these can form clauses in Latin, though they are often best translated into English by clauses.

THE NEGATIVES

188. There are two kinds of negatives in Latin.

a. RULE: Nōn, not, and neque, and not, nor, are used to negative statements and questions.

That is, they are used with the indicative, the subjunctive of contingent futurity (184, b), the subjunctive of fact (184, c), and the infinitive. Examples: nōn laudat, he does not praise; nōn laudet, he would not praise; nōnne laudat? does he not praise?

b. RULE: Nē, not, and nēve, and not, nor, are used to negative the subjunctive of desire (184, a).

But nē . . . quidem, not even, is used in statements. Examples: nē laudet, let him not praise, or may he not praise: nē laudat quidem, he does not even praise.

THE TENSES

189. The tense of a verb tells either one or both of two things: (1) the time of the action, whether past, present, or future; and (2) the stage of progress of the action at that time, whether already completed, still going on, or about to take place. For example, the following forms are all past, and yet express different things: laudāvit, he praised, simply puts the action in the past; laudāverat, he had praised, means that the action was already completed in the past time; laudābat, he was praising, means that the action was going on in the past time; and laudātūrus erat, he was going to praise, means that in the past time the action was on the point of taking place. Latin is much more accurate in its use of tenses than English is.

THE TENSES OF THE INDICATIVE

190. The Present regularly puts the action in the present time and corresponds to all the forms of the English present. Example: laudat, he praises (simple), he is praising (progressive), he does praise (emphatic).

a. The historical present speaks of a past fact as if it were present, in order to put it vividly before the mind. It is much more common in Latin than in English, and therefore should usually be translated by a past. Example: oppida sua omnia incendunt (I, 5, 3), they burned (burn) all their towns.

b. With such expressions as iam diū, iam prīdem, for a long time, multōs annōs, for many years, the Latin present is to be translated by the English present perfect. Example: multōs annōs tē moneō, I have been warning you for many years. There are really two ideas, "I have been in the past" and "I still am." English expresses one of them; Latin, like French and German, expresses the other.

c. For the present with dum, etc., see 234, a.

191. The Imperfect puts the action in the past and represents it as going on at that time. See 189. Example; laudābat, he was praising.

a. The imperfect is often used of repeated past action; as laudābat, he used to praise, or he kept praising. It is less often used of attempted past action; as laudābat, he tried to praise.

b. With the expressions mentioned in 190, b, the imperfect is to be translated by the English past perfect. Example: multōs annōs tē monēbam, I had been warning you for many years.

192. The Future puts the action in the future time and corresponds to the English future. See 199. Example: laudābō, I shall or will praise, or be praising.

193. The Perfect has two uses.

I. The present (or definite) perfect corresponds to the English present perfect with have. It represents the action as completed at the present time. Example: laudāvī, I have praised.

a. This perfect is often nearly equivalent to a present. For example, vēnī, I have come, is nearly equivalent to I am here. A few perfects are regularly translated by presents; especially nōvī, cognōvī, I know (literally I have found out), and cōnsuēvī, I am accustomed (literally I have become accustomed). Cf. the English, "I've got it," for "I have it."

II. The historical (or indefinite) perfect simply puts the action in the past, without telling anything about the stage of progress (189) at that time. It corresponds to the English past tense. Example: laudāvī, I praised.

194. The Pluperfect describes the action as already completed in the past, or puts it at a time before another past point of time. See 189. Example: laudāveram, I had praised.

a. The pluperfect of the verbs mentioned in 193, I, a, are nearly equivalent to imperfects. Examples: vēneram, I had come, i. e., I was there; nōveram, I knew; cōnsuēveram, I was accustomed.

195. The Future Perfect represents the action as completed in future time, or as to take place before some future point of time. See 199. Example: laudāverō, I shall or will have praised.

a. The future perfects of the verbs mentioned in 193, I, a, are nearly equivalent to futures. Examples: vēnerō, I shall have come, i. e., I shall be there; nōverō, I shall know; cōnsuēverō, I shall be accustomed.

196. The Active Periphrastic (75) Tenses represent the action as about to take place in a time future to the time of the tense of sum. Examples: laudātūrus est, he is about to praise; laudātūrus erat, he was about to praise; laudātūrus erit, he will be about to praise.

INDICATIVE TENSES IN NARRATION

197. In telling of past events the indicative tenses used are the historical perfect (or the equivalent historical present), the imperfect, the pluperfect, and occasionally the imperfect periphrastic. The perfect is the narrating tense in which the successive main events of the story are told. The other tenses are the descriptive tenses in which the details which surround the main events are told. See 189.

For example, suppose one wished to begin a story with the following points. "The Helvetii lived in a small country; they planned to leave; Caesar went to Gaul." Told in that way all the verbs would be perfects; but the story is badly told. One would certainly pick out some chief event or events and group the others about them; and whatever events he so picked out would be expressed by the perfect, while the rest would be imperfect and pluperfect. He might begin in this way, "The Helvetii, who lived....., planned..... But Caesar went....." Then planned and went are perfects, each being thought of as a separate step in the story; but lived is thought of as subordinate detail, telling something that was going on at the time of the main event, planned, and must be imperfect in Latin, though English uses the simple past tense. Or he might prefer to begin in this way, "The Helvetii, who lived....., had planned..... But Caesar went." Then went is thought of as the first main event, and is the only perfect; lived is still imperfect; but had planned is thought of as a subordinate detail, giving something which had happened before the went and which led up to it, and is, therefore, a pluperfect.

198. The chief events, thus expressed by perfects, are usually made the principal, or independent clauses; and the subordinate details, thus expressed in imperfects and pluperfects, are usually made the subordinate, or dependent clauses. Therefore the following principle is a good one to follow unless there appears a clear reason for violating it:

RULE: In a narrative of past events the independent clauses generally use the perfect, the dependent clauses generally use the imperfect and pluperfect.

a. But there are dependent indicative clauses in which this principle does not hold. The following are the most important.

1. After postquam, ubi, etc. (see 237), the perfect or historical present is regularly used. See also 235, a, and 236, a.

2. After dum, while (see 234, a) the present is regularly used.

THE FUTURE AND FUTURE PERFECT

199. Latin is very accurate in the use of the future and future perfect, while English is very inaccurate. In many subordinate clauses English uses the present for the future or the future perfect, while Latin uses the tenses required by the meanings. For an example see 256.

THE TENSES OF THE SUBJUNCTIVE

200. The tenses of the subjunctive have two sets of meanings.

a. When the subjunctive has the same meaning as the indicative (184, c), the tenses of the subjunctive mean the same as the corresponding indicative tenses.

b. When the subjunctive has one of its other meanings (184, a, b), the time denoted by the tenses is future to that denoted by the corresponding indicative tenses. Examples: laudet, let him praise, is a command to praise in the future; imperāvit ut laudāret, he commanded that he praise, is a past command, to be carried into effect after the time of commanding.

201. The following table shows the meanings of the subjunctive tenses.

Present	= present or future
Imperfect	= imperfect or future to a past
Perfect	= perfect or future perfect
Pluperfect	= pluperfect or future perfect to a past

a. Some tenses have developed special meanings in certain constructions. See 221, 226, 254.

b. Any tense of the subjunctive may thus refer to the future. But where the meaning would be doubtful and it is necessary to express the future clearly, the periphrastic tenses are used. So rogō quid faciās regularly means I ask what you are doing, and would not be understood to mean I ask what you will do. Therefore the latter meaning must be expressed by rogō quid factūrus sīs.

THE SUBJUNCTIVE TENSES IN DEPENDENCE

202. When a subjunctive clause depends on some other clause, a little knowledge of the real meaning of the English will enable one to use the right tense, just as in the indicative. When the tenses mean the same as those of the indicative they will be used in the same way (197, 198). When they have the future set of meanings, it will be found that a present or perfect is usually required after a tense of present or future meaning, and the imperfect and pluperfect after one of past meaning. For example: I come, or I shall come, that I may praise, laudem; I came that I might praise, laudārem. In the subjunctive the usage is more regular than in the indicative, so that the convenient but not very accurate rule, called the rule of sequence of tenses, can be followed.

RULE: In dependent subjunctive clauses principal tenses follow principal, and historical follow historical.

203. Principal tenses are those which have to do with the present and future, historical are those which have to do with the past. The following table of examples shows which are the principal and which the historical tenses of both indicative and subjunctive.

Principal Tenses

INDICATIVE		SUBJUNCTIVE
Present	rogō, I ask	Present	quid faciat, what he is doing
Future	rogābō, I shall ask	Perfect	quid fēcerit, what he has done (or did)
Present perfect	rogāvī, I have asked
Future perfect	rogāverō, I shall have asked

Historical Tenses

Imperfect	rogābam, I was asking	Imperfect	quid faceret, what he was doing
Historical perf.	rogāvī, I asked	Pluperfect	quid fēcisset, what he had done
Pluperfect	rogāveram, I had asked

a. Notice that the perfect subjunctive, even when it means past time, is called a principal tense.

204. Exceptions to Rule of Sequence. Two special points must be mentioned, not hard to understand if one remembers that this rule tells only how the natural meanings of the tenses make them depend on each other.

a. An exception may occur whenever the meaning of the sentence makes it natural. Still, Latin is not fond of these exceptions, and if exceptional tenses must be used it is better to use an indicative construction instead of a subjunctive, when there is a choice. For example, if the sentence, he marched around because the mountains are high, is to be put into Latin, cum sint would be an exception to sequence and it is better to use the indicative construction quod sunt.

The most common exceptions are in result clauses, where a perfect subjunctive sometimes follows a perfect indicative. Example: temporis tanta fuit exiguitas, ut tempus dēfuerit (II, 21, 9), so short was the time that there was no opportunity.

b. A subjunctive following an historical present may be either principal or historical, for it may either keep up the liveliness of the present or behave as if the perfect had been used. Examples: diem dīcunt quā diē conveniant (I, 6, 14), they appoint a day on which they are to assemble; omne frūmentum combūrunt ut parātiōrēs ad perīcula subeunda essent (I, 5, 5), they burned all the grain that they might be more ready to undergo danger.

TENSES OF INFINITIVES AND PARTICIPLES

205. RULE: The time denoted by infinitives and participles is relative to the tenses of the verbs on which they depend.

That is, a present infinitive or participle expresses action as going on at the time of the main verb, whether that is present, future, or past; a future expresses action as future to the time of the main verb; and a perfect expresses action as completed at the time of the main verb. The following table gives examples of the infinitive. The tense meanings of the participles are the same.

dīcō eum	laudāre	laudātūrum esse	laudāvisse
lit. him	to be praising	to be about to praise	to have praised
I say that he	is praising	will praise	has praised, or praised dīcam eum,
I shall say that he	is praising	will praise	has praised, or praised dīxī eum,
I said that he	was praising	would praise	had praised

a. With such perfects as dēbuī, licuit, oportuit, potuī, Latin correctly uses the present infinitive, though English illogically says ought to have, etc. Example: laudāre potuī lit. I was able to praise, = I could have praised.

b. Some verbs lack the supine stem and therefore have no future active infinitive. The future passive infinitive which is given in the paradigms is rarely used. In both cases the place of the future infinitive is taken by fore (futūrum esse) ut, it will (would) be that, with the present or imperfect subjunctive. Examples: dīcit fore ut timeat, lit. he says that it will be that he fears, = he says that he will fear; dīxit fore ut laudārētur, lit. he said that it would be that he was praised, = he said that he would be praised.

STATEMENTS

206. The Indicative is used to state facts. Examples: Caesar vēnit, Caesar came; Caesar nōn veniet, Caesar will not come.

207. The Subjunctive of Contingent Futurity (184, b) is used to state what would take place under some condition. The condition is usually, but not always, expressed. This kind of statement is the conclusion of the conditional sentences in 254 and 257. For the peculiar use of tenses see those paragraphs. In many grammars this use of the subjunctive is called potential. Examples: Caesar veniat, Caesar would come; Caesar nōn vēnissēt, Caesar would not have come; velim, I should like.

208. The Potential Subjunctive (184, b) is sometimes used to state what may or can happen. It is very rarely used except where a negative is expressed or implied and in the phrase aliquis dīcat, some one may say. In an independent sentence the student should always express may, might, can, could, by such words as possum and licet. Example: nēmō dubitet, but usually nēmō dubitāre potest, no one can doubt.

QUESTIONS

USE OF MODES

209. The indicative, the subjunctive of contingent futurity, and, rarely, the potential subjunctive, are used in questions with precisely the same meanings as in statements (206-208). Examples: quis veniet? who will come? quis veniat? who would come? quis dubitet? who can doubt (implying that no one can)?

210. A Deliberative Question is one that asks for an expression of some one's will. The answer, if any, is a command. This kind of question is asked by the subjunctive. Example: quid faciam? what shall I do? what am I to do?

a. Under deliberative questions are usually classed those subjunctive questions which ask why one should do something or what one should do. Example: cūr dubitem? why should I doubt?

211. A rhetorical question is one which is used for rhetorical effect and which expects no answer. Any of the above questions may be either rhetorical or real. The rhetorical character of the question has no effect on the mode.

INTRODUCTORY WORDS

212. Questions which can not be answered by yes or no are introduced in Latin, as in English, by an interrogative pronoun, adjective, or adverb. Examples: quis vēnit? who came? quālis est? what sort of man is he? ubi est? where is he?

213. RULE: Questions which can be answered by yes or no are usually, but not always, introduced by an interrogative particle.

In written English the interrogation point and usually the order of words show that a sentence is a question. The Romans had no interrogation point, and the order of words was free, so that an introductory particle was usually necessary.

a. RULE: When the question asks for information, without suggesting the answer, the enclitic -ne is added to the first word.

The first word is regularly the verb, unless some other word is put first for emphasis. Examples: scrībitne epistulam? is he writing a letter? epistulamne scrībit? is it a letter that he is writing?

b. RULE: When the form of the question suggests the answer yes, the interrogative particle is nōnne.

Example: nōnne epistulam scrībit? is he not writing a letter?

c. RULE: When the form of the question suggests the answer no, the interrogative particle is num.

Example: num epistulam scrībit? he is not writing a letter, is he?

DOUBLE QUESTIONS

214. Double questions ask which of two or more possibilities is true. Utrum may stand at the beginning not to be translated, but as a mere warning that a double question is to follow; or -ne may be added to the first word; or no introductory word may be used, as always in English. The or is expressed by an; or not is annōn. Examples: utrum pugnāvit an fūgit? pugnāvitne an fūgit? pugnāvit an fūgit? did he fight or run away? pugnāvit annōn? did he fight or not?

ANSWERS

215. Latin has no words answering exactly to yes and no. It often replies by repeating the verb as a statement; or it may use ita, sānē, etc , for yes, nōn, minimē, etc., for no. Example: epistulamne scrībit? scrībit, yes; nōn scrībit, no.

COMMANDS AND PROHIBITIONS

216. These are expressions of will, for which the appropriate modes are the subjunctive of desire (184, a) and the imperative (185). The negative with the subjunctive is nē (188, b).

217. RULE: An Exhortation is a command or prohibition in the first person plural of the present subjunctive.

Examples: laudēmus, let us praise; nē eāmus, let us not go.

218. RULE: A Command in the second person is expressed by the imperative.

The future imperative is seldom used unless the verb used has no present. Examples: venīte, come (ye); mementō, remember.

219. RULE: A Prohibition (Negative Command) in the second person is usually expressed by nōlī, nōlīte, be unwilling, and the present infinitive.

A prohibition is less often expressed by cavē (with or without nē), take care, and the present subjunctive; or by nē and the perfect subjunctive. Examples: nōlī dubitāre, do not doubt; less often cavē (nē) dubitēs, or nē dubitāverīs.

220. RULE: A Command or Prohibition in the third person is regularly expressed by the third person of the present subjunctive.

Examples: eat, let him go; nē veniant, let them not come.

WISHES

221. Wishes are regularly expressed by the subjunctive of desire (184, a) and are usually introduced by utinam (not to be translated).

a. RULE: A wish for something in the future is expressed by the present subjunctive, with or without utinam.

Example: (utinam) adsit, may he be here!

b. RULE: A wish for something at the present time is expressed by the imperfect subjunctive with utinam.

c. RULE: A wish for something in the past is expressed by the pluperfect subjunctive with utinam.

Both of these express a wish, or rather a regret, for something unattainable. Examples: utinam adesset, would that he were here! utinam affuisset, would that he had been here!

COORDINATE CLAUSES

222. A coordinate clause is connected with another clause by means of a coordinating conjunction. The coordinating conjunctions are such as mean and, but, or, for, and the like. They are used exactly as in English.

DEPENDENT CLAUSES

223. Dependent clauses are those which are attached to other clauses by a relative or interrogative pronoun or adverb, or by a subordinating conjunction. Subordinating conjunctions are such as mean if, because, although, when, after, before, in order that, so that, and the like.

Neither the relatives nor any of the conjunctions have in themselves any effect on the mode of the verb in the dependent clause; but that clause may contain the indicative or the subjunctive with any of its meanings (184, a-c).

Dependent clauses are classified according to their meaning and use in the following groups: purpose clauses (225), result clauses (226), substantive clauses of desire (substantive purpose) (228), substantive clauses of result or fact (229), relative clauses of characteristic (230), determining relative clauses (231), parenthetical relative clauses (232), temporal clauses (233-242), causal clauses (243-245), adversative (concessive) clauses (246, 247), substantive quod clauses (248), conditional clauses (249-259), clauses of proviso (260), clauses of comparison (261), indirect questions (262-264), indirect discourse (265-273), attracted clauses (274), infinitive clauses (277-280).

PURPOSE AND RESULT CLAUSES

224. The subjunctive of desire (184, a) is used in purpose clauses, the subjunctive of fact (184, c) in result clauses. This explains the difference in negatives (188), and on the other hand the presence of a negative determines the kind of clause. In the ut clauses, or when an English clause is to be translated into Latin, the only test is the meaning: if any feeling of will or intention is implied, the clause is one of purpose; otherwise, of result.

PURPOSE CLAUSES

225. RULE: Purpose may be expressed by the subjunctive with ut, nē, quō, or a relative.

The infinitive, common in English, is never to be used. For the so-called substantive clause of purpose, see 228. The connecting words are used as follows:

a. In affirmative clauses:

1. If the principal clause contains a noun which can conveniently be used as an antecedent, a relative pronoun or adverb is commonly used. Example: hominēs mīsit quī vidērent, he sent men to see, lit. who were to see.

2. If the purpose clause contains an adjective or adverb in the comparative degree, quō is used. Example: vēnit quō facilius vidēret, he came that he might see more easily, lit. by which the more easily he might see.

3. Otherwise, and most commonly, the conjunction ut is used. Example: vēnit ut vidēret, he came to see, that he might see, or in order to see; venit ut videat, he comes to see.

b. In negative clauses the conjunction nē is always used. Example: hoc fēcit nē quis (not ut nēmō) vidēret, he did this that no one might see, or to keep anyone from seeing.

RESULT CLAUSES

226. RULE: Result is expressed by the subjunctive with ut or ut nōn.

For the so-called relative clause of result see 230, a. For the substantive clause of result see 229. Examples: mōns impendēbat, ut perpaucī prohibēre possent (I, 6, 4), a mountain overhung, so that a very few could easily check; incrēdibilī lēnitāte, ita ut iūdicārī nōn possit (I, 12, 2), of extraordinary sluggishness, so that it can not be determined; tam fortis est ut pugnet, he is so brave that he would fight, or as to fight, or that he fights.

SUBSTANTIVE CLAUSES OF DESIRE (PURPOSE) AND OF RESULT

227. These clauses differ from clauses of purpose and result in that they are used like nouns, either as the object of a transitive verb, or as the subject of the passive, or in apposition with a noun or neuter pronoun.

They are also called complementary clauses, because they serve to complement (complete) the meaning of such expressions as I command, I hinder, the result is.

There is the same difference between substantive clauses of desire (purpose) and substantive clauses of result as between purpose clauses and result clauses, and they are to be distinguished in the same way (224).

SUBSTANTIVE CLAUSES OF DESIRE (PURPOSE)

228. These clauses all consist of the subjunctive of desire (184, a) introduced by a conjunction. As the subjunctive of desire is divided into the volitive (expressing will) and the optative (expressing wish), some grammars divide these clauses into substantive volitive clauses and substantive optative clauses. The older name, substantive purpose clauses, is not good, because they do not really express purpose. For example: imperō ut eās, I command you to go, does not mean I command in order that you may go, but rather I give the command "go".

a. RULE: Most verbs expressing any form of desire, or of attempt to carry out a desire, may take the subjunctive with ut or nē.

Such are verbs meaning accomplish (when the subject is a conscious agent), command, permit, persuade, request, resolve, strive, urge, wish, and the like.

But after most of these verbs the infinitive may be used instead, and it always is used after iubeō, command, cōnor, attempt, patior, sinō, permit. See 280, a. Ut is often omitted after verbs of asking, commanding, and wishing, especially after volō. The subjunctive, usually without ut, is often used with oportet, it is right, and licet, it is permitted; but see 276. Examples: cīvitātī persuāsit ut exīrent (I, 2, 3), he persuaded the citizens to leave; cīvitātī persuāsit nē exīrent, he persuaded the citizens not to leave; oportet eat, he ought to go; eī licet eat, he may go; obsidēs utī dent perficit (I, 9, 11), he causes them to give hostages.

b. RULE: Verbs expressing fear take the subjunctive with nē meaning that, or ut meaning that not.

But nē nōn, that not, is often used instead of ut. Examples: timeō nē veniat, I fear that he will come (originally timeō: nē veniat, I am afraid: let him, or may he, not come); timeō ut (or nē nōn) veniat, I fear that he will not come (originally timeō: veniat, I am afraid: let him or may he, come; ut or nē nōn was then used as the opposite of nē).

c. RULE: Verbs meaning avoid, hinder, prevent, and refuse may take the subjunctive with nē, quīn, or quōminus.

But the infinitive may be used instead Nē is used after an affirmative principal clause, quīn after a negative, quōminus after either positive or negative. Examples: eum impediō nē, or quōminus, veniat, I hinder him from coming; eum nōn impediō quīn, or quōminus, veniat, I do not hinder him from coming; neque recūsātūrōs quōminus esset (I, 31, 24), and that they would not refuse to be.

SUBSTANTIVE UT CLAUSES OF RESULT OR FACT

229. These clauses are all usually called substantive result clauses, but most of them are better called ut clauses of fact, since they do not express result. They usually contain the subjunctive of fact (184, c) and are to be translated by the indicative.

a. RULE: Verbs meaning accomplish take the subjunctive with* ut or ut nōn *when the subject is not a conscious agent.

Compare 228, a. Example: montēs efficiunt ut nōn exīre possint, the mountains make (that they can not) it impossible for them to leave.

b. RULE: Impersonal verbs meaning the result is, it happens, it remains, there is added, and the like, may take the subjunctive with* ut or ut nōn.

The clause is the subject of the verb. But with some of these verbs an indicative quod clause of fact may be used with the same meaning. See 248. Example: hīs rēbus fīēbat ut vagārentur (I, 2, 11), the result was that they wandered.

c. RULE: Such phrases as* mōs est, cōnsuētūdō est (it is the custom), may take the subjunctive with ut or ut nōn.

The clause is a predicate nominative. But a substantive clause of desire (with ut or nē) may be used with such phrases, especially with iūs est, lēx est. Example: mōs est ut ex equīs pugnent, it is their custom to fight on horseback.

d. RULE: Negatived verbs and phrases meaning doubt take the subjunctive with* quīn.

After an affirmative expression of doubting an indirect question with num, an, or sī is used, as whether is in English. Dubitō with the infinitive means hesitate. Example: nōn est dubium quīn hoc fēcerit, there is no doubt that he did this.

RELATIVE CLAUSES OF CHARACTERISTIC

230. GENERAL RULE: The subjunctive is used in certain kinds of relative clauses which describe an indefinite antecedent.

The subjunctive is not used in all relative clauses which describe an antecedent. If the antecedent is definite, the clause is parenthetical (232). If the clause is used chiefly to tell who or what the antecedent is, it is a determining clause (231). If the clause can be turned into a condition without changing the meaning of the sentence, it is a conditional clause (250). Clauses of characteristic are of the following kinds.

a. RULE: The subjunctive is used in relative clauses which are equivalent in meaning to* ut *clauses of result.

These clauses complete the meaning of an expressed or implied antecedent like is = (such) a man (171, a), eius modī, such, or an adjective modified by tam. Certain grammars call some of these clauses relative result clauses. Usually the subjunctive is to be translated as if it were indicative.

Examples: is est quī pugnet, he is a man who fights; secūtae sunt tempestātēs quae nostrōs in castrīs continērent (IV, 34, 8), storms followed which kept our men in camp (= such storms . . . . . that they kept); tam improbus quī nōn fateātur (Cic. Cat. I, 5), so villainous as not to admit.

b. RULE: The subjunctive is used in relative clauses which complete statements and questions of existence and non-existence.

So after est quī, there is a man who; nōn or nēmō or nūllus est quī, there is no one who; quis est quī? who is there who? sōlus or ūnus est quī he is the only man who; etc. Usually the subjunctive is to be translated as if it were indicative.

Examples: nūllī sunt quī putent, there are none who think; erant omnīnō itinera duo quibus exīre possent (I, 6, 1), there were only two ways by which they could leave.

c. In some relative clauses of characteristic the subjunctive is to be translated by can, could, or by should, ought. Examples: ūnum (iter) vix quā singulī carrī dūcerentur (I, 6, 4), one road by which wagons could be moved; neque commissum intellegeret quārē timēret (I, 14, 6), he did not know that anything had been done on account of which he should be afraid.

DETERMINING RELATIVE CLAUSES

231. RULE: Relative clauses which are used for the purpose of telling what person or thing is meant by an indefinite antecedent, employ the indicative.

Example: ad eam partem Ōceanī quae est ad Hispāniam (I, 1, 21), to that part of the ocean which is near Spain.

PARENTHETICAL RELATIVE CLAUSES

232. RULE: A relative clause for which a parenthetical statement may be substituted usually employs the indicative.

The antecedent of a parenthetical clause must always be definite, so that the relative clause may be entirely removed without destroying the meaning of the rest of the sentence. When the antecedent is indefinite the clause is either characterizing (230), determining (231), or conditional (250). Example: Dumnorīgī, quī prīncipātum obtinēbat, persuādet (I, 3, 14), he persuaded Dumnorix, who held the chief power; the same meaning could be expressed by Dumnorīgī (is prīncipātum obtinēbat) persuādet.

TEMPORAL CLAUSES

233. There are many conjunctions denoting time relations. The most common is cum which must be treated by itself, but the others may be classified according to their meanings.

While, as long as

234. Conjunctions with these meanings show that one act was going on at the same time as another. Cum with the imperfect subjunctive does the same.

a. RULE: Dum meaning while (i.e., at some time during the time that) is used with the present indicative, even in speaking of past time.

See 198, a, 2. Example: dum haec geruntur, Caesarī nūntiātum est (I, 46, 1), while these things were going on, it was reported to Caesar.

b. RULE: Dum, dōnec, quoad, and quam diū, as long as, while (i. e., during the entire time that) are used with the indicative, which is usually in the same tense as the main verb.

Example: quoad potuit, restitit (IV, 12, 16), he resisted as long as he could.

Until

235. Conjunctions meaning until show that the action of the principal clause lasted up to that of the subordinate clause. Sometimes the actor in the principal clause foresees the second act and intends to bring it about, or prepares for it, and sometimes he does not. This is the basis for the distinction in the use of modes.

a. RULE: Dum, dōnec, and quoad meaning until are used with the indicative when the subordinate act is not represented as foreseen.

The perfect is regularly used for past time. Example: Gallī fuērunt līberī dum Caesar vēnit, the Gauls were free until Caesar came.

b. RULE: Dum, dōnec, and quoad meaning until are used with the subjunctive when the subordinate act is represented as foreseen.

Examples: Gallī exspectāvērunt dum Caesar venīret, the Gauls waited until Caesar should come, or for Caesar to come, or until Caesar came.

Before

236. Conjunctions meaning before also represent the action of the subordinate clause as subsequent to that of the principal clause, and the principle on which the choice of modes is based is the same as that given in 235.

a. RULE: Priusquam and antequam are used with the indicative when the subordinate act is not represented as foreseen.

The perfect is regularly used for past time. Example: Gallī inter sē pugnāvērunt priusquam Caesar vēnit, the Gauls fought with one another before Caesar came.

b. RULE: Priusquam and antequam are used with the subjunctive when the subordinate act is represented as foreseen.

Example: Gallī magnās cōpiās comparāre cōnātī sunt priusquam Caesar venīret, the Gauls tried to prepare large forces before Caesar should arrive, or arrived, or in view of Caesar's arrival.

c. These conjunctions are often written as two words, the prius or ante standing in the principal clause, and the quam at the beginning of the subordinate clause. Translate as if the complete word stood where quam does. Example: Gallī prius inter sē pugnāvērunt quam Caesar vēnit, translated as in a.

After

237. RULE: Postquam, after, ut, ubi, when (after, not while), simul ac, cum prīmum, as soon as (immediately after), are used with the indicative, generally the perfect or the historical present.

Example: ubi certiōrēs factī sunt, lēgātōs mittunt (I, 7, 6), when they were informed of it they sent envoys.

Cum

238. Cum has three chief uses:—

It is in reality an undeclined relative, whose antecedent is something like at the time or at a time, sometimes expressed, more often only implied. The use of modes with cum is much the same as with the declined relative (230-232, 245, 247, 250).

239. Causal and Adversative Cum.

RULE: Cum meaning since or although is used with all tenses of the subjunctive.

Compare the causal relative (245) and the adversative relative (247). Examples: quae cum ita sint, perge (Cic. Cat. I, 10), since this is so, go on; hīs cum persuādēre nōn possent, lēgātōs mittunt (I, 9, 2), since they could not persuade them, they sent envoys; cum ad vesperum pugnātum sit (I, 26, 4), although they fought till evening.

240. Temporal cum. Inaccurate but convenient rules are:—

RULE: Cum meaning when is always used with the indicative when the principal verb is present or future.

RULE: Cum meaning when is generally followed by the imperfect or pluperfect subjunctive when the principal verb is past.

See examples under 241 and 242, which give more accurate rules for the same clauses.

241. Temporal Cum with the Indicative.

a. Clauses of Date.

RULE: Cum meaning when is followed by the indicative when the clause merely dates the action of the principal clause.

These clauses are in reality determining clauses (231), and are especially common when an antecedent like tum or eō tempore is expressed in the principal clause. But a subjunctive is often found where an indicative might be expected. Examples: tum cum ex urbe Catilīnam ēiciēbam (Cic. Cat. III, 3), at the time when I was trying to drive Catiline from the city; cum Caesar in Galliam vēnit, prīncipēs erant Haeduī (VI, 12, 1), at the time when Caesar came to Gaul the Haedui were the leaders.

b. Clauses of Repeated Action.

RULE: Cum meaning whenever is usually followed by the indicative.

These clauses correspond exactly to conditional relative clauses (150). It is necessary only that whenever be a possible translation of cum; when is usually a better translation. For the occasional subjunctive in such clauses see 242, b.

Example: haec cum dēfīxerat, contrāria duo statuēbat (IV, 17, 10), when he had set them firmly (in each of several cases) he put two others opposite.

c. Inverted Cum Clauses.

RULE: Cum meaning when is followed by the indicative when the principal action is stated in the cum clause.

In the most common type of cum clauses (242, a) the principal action is stated in the principal clause, and the cum clause describes the situation under which it happened. In the inverted clause this relation is reversed.

Example: vix agmen prōcesserat, cum Gallī cohortātī (sunt) inter sē (VI, 8, 1), hardly had the line advanced, when the Gauls encouraged one another (for cum.....prōcessisset,.....cohortātī sunt, when the line had advanced the Gauls encouraged, etc.).

242. Temporal Cum with the Subjunctive.

a. Situation and Narrative Clauses.

RULE: Cum meaning when is followed by the subjunctive when the clause describes the situation under which the principal action took place.

RULE: Cum meaning when is followed by the subjunctive when the clause states a new point in the story. (Unless the clause is inverted, 241, c.)

These rules are given together because most subjunctive clauses are both situation and narrative clauses. Sometimes, however, one rule seems to apply better than the other. The situation clause corresponds to the relative clause of characteristic (230). Examples: cum esset Caesar in citeriōre Galliā, crēbrī ad eum rūmōrēs afferēbantur (II, 1, 1), when Caesar was in Cisalpine Gaul, frequent rumors came to him (mainly situation, for the fact that Caesar was in Cisalpine Gaul has been stated before, so that it is no new point in the story); cum cīvitās iūs suum exsequī cōnārētur, Orgetorīx mortuus est (I, 4, 2), while the state was trying to enforce its laws, Orgetorix died (both situation and narrative, for the fact that the state tried to enforce its laws is told only in this cum clause).

b. Clauses of Repeated Action.

RULE: Cum meaning whenever is sometimes followed by the subjunctive.

Compare 241, b. Example: cum ferrum sē īnflexisset, neque ēvellere poterant (I, 25, 7), when the iron had bent (in each of many cases), they could neither draw it out, etc.

CAUSAL CLAUSES

243. Dependent causal clauses are introduced by the conjunctions cum, quod, quia, quoniam, and quandō, or by the relative. The conjunctions nam, enim, etenim, for, introduce coordinate clauses.

244. RULE: Quod, quia, quoniam, and quandō, because, since, are used with the indicative unless the reason is quoted.

When the writer wishes to imply because (as he said), (as he thought), (as I said), (as I thought), the subjunctive is used. See 273. Examples: (with the indicative) reliquōs Gallōs praecēdunt, quod contendunt (I, 1, 11), they surpass the other Gauls because they fight; (with the subjunctive) quod sit dēstitūtus queritur (I, 16, 18), he complained because (as he said) he had been deserted.

245. RULE: Cum, since, because, and often quī, since he, etc., are used with the subjunctive.

But the indicative is often used with quī, where the causal idea is perfectly clear. If praesertim, especially, stands in a subjunctive quī or cum clause, the clause is probably causal. Examples: (with the subjunctive) illī autem, quī omnia praeclāra sentīrent, negōtium suscēpērunt (Cic. Cat. III, 5), and they, since they had none but patriotic thoughts, undertook the matter; (with the indicative) fuit mīlitum virtūs laudanda, quī adaequārunt (V, 8, 12), the energy of the soldiers deserved praise, who (= since they) kept up with, etc. For example with cum, see 239.

ADVERSATIVE (CONCESSIVE) CLAUSES

246. RULE: Quamquam, although, and etsī, tametsī, even if, although, are used with the indicative.

Example: etsī nōndum eōrum cōnsilia cognōverant, tamen suspicābātur (IV, 31, 1), although he did not yet know their plans, nevertheless he suspected. But quamquam sometimes introduces an independent sentence, and is then best translated by and yet.

247. RULE: Cum, although, and less commonly quamvīs (in Cicero), however much, however, although, quī, although he, etc., ut, although, are used with the subjunctive.

Examples: (for cum see 239) quamvīs senex sit, fortis est, however old he may be, he is brave; ut omnia contrā opīniōnem acciderent (Caes. III, 9, 17), though everything should turn out contrary to their expectations. But the indicative is sometimes used with quī when the adversative idea is clear.

SUBSTANTIVE QUOD CLAUSES

248. RULE: Substantive clauses with quod, that, employ the indicative.

This clause is most commonly used as the appositive of a neuter pronoun. Example: illa praetereō, quod Maelium occīdit (Cic. Cat. I, 3), I pass over this, that he slew Maelius.

a. Sometimes the quod clause, standing at the beginning of its sentence, is used in the sense of as to the fact that, whereas. Example: quod ūnum pāgum adortus es, nōlī ob eam rem dēspicere (compare I, 13, 12), as to your having attacked one canton, do not despise us on that account.

CONDITIONAL SENTENCES

249. A conditional sentence has two essential clauses, a condition and a conclusion. The condition is the dependent clause, and is so called because it states the condition on which the truth of the principal clause depends; the conclusion is the principal clause. Example: if he comes (condition) I shall see him (conclusion).

CONNECTIVES IN CONDITIONAL SENTENCES.

250. The connectives are the conjunctions sī, if, sī nōn, if not, nisi, if not or unless, sīn, but if, and relative pronouns and adverbs used in a conditional sense.

Whenever a relative has for its antecedent, either expressed or implied, a word like anyone, everyone, always, everywhere (any word that includes all of a class of objects), it is a conditional relative, and the clause is a condition. For example, anyone who thinks will see, means if anyone thinks he will see; whenever I saw him he used to say, means if at any time I saw him he used to say. Compare this use of the relative with those given in 230-232.

CLASSES OF CONDITIONAL SENTENCES

251. There are four classes of conditional sentences, two for those dealing with present or past time, two for those dealing with future time:

a. Undetermined Present or Past (253). sī pugnat, vincit, if he fights he conquers; sī pugnāvit, vīcit, if he fought he conquered.

b. Present or Past Contrary to Fact (254). sī pugnāret, vinceret, if he were fighting he would be conquering; sī pugnāvisset, vīcisset, if he had fought he would have conquered.

c. More Vivid (Confident) Future (256). sī pugnābit, vincet, if he fights (shall fight) he will conquer.

d. Less Vivid (Confident) Future (257). sī pugnet, vincat, if he should fight he would conquer.

A. Present or Past

252. In present or past time a conditional sentence may either express no opinion as the truth or falsity of a statement, simply saying that one thing is true if another is; or it may imply that a condition is not fulfilled, and that in consequence the conclusion is not fulfilled. There is no form of condition which affirms the truth of a statement. The speaker or hearer may know it to be true, but the sentence does not say so.

253. Undetermined Present or Past. RULE: A present or past conditional sentence whose form affirms nothing as to its fulfillment employs the present or past tenses of the indicative.

Examples: sī fortis est eum laudō, if he is brave I praise him; quī fortis est prō patriā pugnat, whoever is brave fights for his country; nisi prō patriā pugnāvit nōn fortis fuit, unless he fought for his country he was not brave.

254. Present or Past Contrary to Fact. RULE: A present or past conditional sentence whose form implies that the condition is not or was not fulfilled employs the imperfect or pluperfect subjunctive.

The imperfect subjunctive is used to express present time, the pluperfect to express past time. Examples: sī fortis esset eum laudārem, if he were brave I should praise, or be praising, him (implying but he is not, and I do not); nisi prō patriā pugnāvisset eum nōn laudāvissem, unless he had (if he had not) fought for his country I should not have praised him (implying but he did, and I do; the contrary of the negative supposition); sī pugnāvisset eum laudārem, if he had fought I should praise, or be praising, him (implying but he did not, and I do not; notice the change of tense).

a. When the conclusion of such conditions contains a verb meaning could or ought, or such expressions as it would be hard, or just, the verb of the conclusion is usually in the indicative, the imperfect for present time, the perfect or pluperfect for past time. The condition requires the subjunctive, like any other condition contrary to fact.

This is because the conclusion is not usually really contrary to fact, though the English idiom makes it seem so. When the conclusion is really contrary to fact, the subjunctive is used. Examples: sī fortis esset pugnāre poterat, if he were brave he could fight (he has the power in any case; hence the indicative); sī fortis fuisset pugnāre dēbuit or dēbuerat, if he had been brave he ought to have fought (the duty rested upon him in any case; hence the indicative).

B. Future

255. There are two forms of future conditions, one expressing less confidence in the fulfillment of the condition than the other. There is no form to express nonfulfillment, since one can not be sure of the nonfulfillment of a future condition.

256. More Vivid (Confident) Future. RULE: A future conditional sentence whose translation contains shall or will employs the future or future perfect indicative.

The English commonly uses the present with a future meaning in the condition. If I see him I shall tell him, means if I shall see him I shall tell him, and the Latin is precise in using the future. Moreover, if the condition must be fulfilled before the conclusion can take place, the Latin uses the future perfect, while the English commonly uses the present. If he arrives first he will tell him, means if he shall have arrived first, and the Latin is precise in using the future perfect. Examples: sī pugnābit eum laudābō, if he fights or is fighting (shall fight or shall be fighting) I shall praise him; quī pugnāverit laudābitur, whoever fights or has fought (shall have fought) will be praised.

257. Less Vivid (Confident) Future. RULE: A future conditional sentence whose translation contains should or would employs the present or perfect subjunctive

The difference between the present and perfect is the same as that between the future and future perfect indicative in 256. Examples: sī pugnet vincat, if he should fight, or were to fight, he would conquer; quī pugnet laudētur, whoever should fight, or should be fighting, would be praised; sī nōn pugnāverit eum nōn laudem, if he should not fight, or should not have fought, I should not praise him.

MIXED CONDITIONS

258. In Latin, as in English, the condition and the conclusion are usually of the same form. But sometimes, in both languages, one may wish to use a condition of one form, a conclusion of another. Example: sī veniat hīc adsumus, if he should come we are here.

CONDITION OMITTED OR IMPLIED

259. Instead of being expressed by a clause as in the examples given above, the condition may be implied in a phrase or even in a single word. Sometimes it is omitted altogether, but is supplied in thought. Examples: damnātum poenam sequī oportēbat (I, 4, 3), (if) condemned, it was necessary that punishment be inflicted on him; dīcat, he would say (if he should be asked); velim, I should like. The last two are simply the independent subjunctive of contingent futurity (207).

CLAUSES OF PROVISO

260. RULE: Dum, modo, and dummodo in the sense of if only, provided that, are used with the subjunctive.

Notice that although these seem like conditions the construction is not the same, for the subjunctive is always used, and the negative is often nē. This is because the construction originally meant only let (him come: I will, etc), and the mode is the subjunctive of desire (184, a). Examples: magnō mē metū līberābis dummodo mūrus intersit (Cic. Cat. I, 10), you will rid me of much fear if only there be (only let there be) a wall between us; modo nē (or nōn) discēdat eum vidēbō, if only he do not leave I shall see him.

CLAUSES OF COMPARISON

261. RULE: The subjunctive is used with ac sī, quam sī, quasi ut sī, tamquam, tamquam sī, velut, velut sī, as if, just as if.

The tenses follow the rule of sequence although the English translation might lead one to expect always the imperfect and pluperfect subjunctive. Examples: currit quasi timeat, he runs as if he were afraid; cucurrit quasi timēret, he ran as if he were afraid.

INDIRECT QUOTATION

A. INDIRECT QUESTIONS

262. GENERAL RULE: The subjunctive is employed in all indirect questions.

An indirect question is a substantive clause introduced by an interrogative word. A direct question may be quoted in the exact words in which it was asked, as he asked "where are you going?"; or it may be quoted indirectly; that is, with such changes as make it a dependent clause, as he asked where I (or he) was going. In the latter form it is an indirect question.

263. RULE: Subjunctive questions (209, 210) retain the subjunctive in the indirect form.

The modal meaning is unchanged. Examples: (direct) quis veniat? who would come? (indirect) rogō quis veniat, I ask who would come; (direct) quid faciam? what am I to do? (indirect) rogāvī quid facerēm, I asked what I was to do.

264. RULE: All indicative questions change to the subjunctive in the indirect form.

a. When the direct question is introduced by an interrogative pronoun, adjective, or adverb (212), the same word serves to introduce the indirect form. Examples: (direct) quis vēnit? who came? (indirect) rogō quis vēnerit, I ask who came; (direct) ubi est? where is he? (indirect) mihi dīxit ubi esset, he told me where he was.

b. When the direct question can be answered by yes or no (213) the indirect form is introduced by num or -ne, whether (no difference in meaning). Sī is also used in the sense of to see whether or whether, Examples: (direct) venitne? is he coming? (indirect) rogō num veniat, or rogō veniatne, I ask whether he is coming; exspectāvit sī venīrent, he waited to see whether they would come.

c. Indirect double questions are introduced by the same particles as direct double questions (214), but or not is expressed by necne, instead of annōn. Examples: rogāvī utrum pugnāvisset, an fūgisset, I asked whether he had fought or run away; rogāvī utrum pugnāvisset necne, I asked whether he had fought or not.

B. INDIRECT DISCOURSE

265. Direct discourse repeats the exact words of a remark or a thought. Example: he said, "the soldiers are brave." Indirect discourse repeats a remark or thought with such changes in the words as to make of it a dependent construction. Example: he said that the soldiers were brave.

Indirect discourse may quote a long speech consisting of separate sentences, and periods may be used between these sentences; but, none the less, each sentence is to be thought of as depending on a verb of saying or thinking, which may be either expressed or implied at the beginning. When one speaks of a principal clause in indirect discourse one means a clause that was principal in the direct form.

Principal Clauses

266. Declarative Sentences. RULE: Every principal clause containing a statement requires the infinitive with subject accusative in indirect discourse (279).

But the subject is not always expressed. Example: mīles est fortis, the soldier is brave, becomes dīxit mīlitem esse fortem, he said that the soldier was brave.

a. For the meanings of the infinitive tenses see 205. It follows from the statements there made that the present infinitive must be used for an original present indicative, the future for the future indicative, and the perfect for the imperfect, perfect, and pluperfect indicative.

267. Imperative Sentences. RULE: Every sentence, containing a command or prohibition requires the subjunctive in indirect discourse.

This is a use of the subjunctive of desire; the negative is nē. Examples: ad Īd. Apr. revertiminī, return about the thirteenth of April, becomes respondit:....ad Īd. Apr. reverterentur (I, 7, 19), he replied....: (that) they should return, etc.; is ita ēgit:....nē....dēspiceret (I, 13, 14), he should not despise (from an original nōlī dēspicere (219), do not despise).

268. Interrogative Sentences. I. RULE: An indicative question (209), if real (211), changes to the subjunctive in indirect discourse.

Example: respondit:....quid sibi vellet (I, 44, 24), what did he want (for an original quid tibi vīs, what do you want?)?

II. RULE. An indicative question (209), if rhetorical (211), changes to the infinitive in indirect discourse.

This is because a rhetorical question is equivalent to a declarative sentence, which would require the infinitive (266) Example: respondit:....num memoriam dēpōnere posse (I, 14, 8), could he forget (for an original I can not forget [can I?])?

III. RULE. A subjunctive question (209, 210), whether real or rhetorical, retains the subjunctive in indirect discourse.

Example: incūsāvit:....cūr quisquam iūdicāret (I, 40, 6), why should anyone suppose (for an original iūdicet. See 210, a)?

269. Subordinate Clauses. RULE: Every subordinate indicative or subjunctive clause of the direct form requires the subjunctive in indirect discourse.

Infinitives remain unchanged. Example: incūsāvit:....ex quō iūdicārī posse quantum habēret in sē bonī cōnstantia, propterea quod ....superāssent (I, 40, 17), from which it could be seen what an advantage courage had, since they had conquered (for original iūdicārī, potest, habeat, superāvistis).

a. But a coordinate relative clause (173, a), being equivalent to a clause connected by et, or some other coordinating conjunction, sometimes has the infinitive in indirect discourse. See example under 269: since quō connects with the preceding sentence posse might have been a subjunctive.

Tenses of the Subjunctive

270. The tenses of the subjunctive regularly follow the rule of sequence, taking their time from the verb of saying or thinking.

a. Repraesentātiō. But after a past verb of saying or thinking the person who quotes very often drops the secondary sequence and uses the tenses of the original speaker, for the sake of vividness. It is best to use past tenses in translating. Example: respondit:....cum ea ita sint ....sēsē pācem esse factūrum (I, 14, 16), he replied....that although these things were so he would make peace.

b. After a perfect infinitive the secondary sequence must be used even if the infinitive depends on a primary verb of saying or thinking; for the perfect infinitive is past, even though it depends on a present. Example: dīcit Caesarem laudātum esse quod fortis esset, he says that Caesar was praised because he was brave.

c. In changing from the direct form to a subjunctive of the indirect the following rule is helpful: keep the stem of the original and follow the sequence. So for example a present or future indicative becomes present subjunctive after dīcit, imperfect after dīxit, in either case retaining the present stem; a perfect or future perfect indicative becomes perfect subjunctive after dīcit, pluperfect after dīxit, in either case retaining the perfect stem.

Other Changes

271. If a pronoun of the first person changes to one of the third person it must be to some form of suī or suus (rarely of ipse). See 165.

All other changes of person or pronouns are the same as in English. Example: hunc mīlitem laudō, I praise this soldier, may become dīcō mē hunc mīlitem laudāre, I say that I praise this soldier, or dīcit sē illum mīlitem laudāre, he says that he praises that soldier. Adverbs will be changed in the same way, now to then, here to there, etc. Vocatives will become nominatives or disappear.

Conditions in Indirect Discourse

272. I. The condition, since it is the dependent clause, must have its verb in the subjunctive. The tense follows the rule of sequence except that the imperfect and pluperfect subjunctive of conditions contrary to fact never change, even after a primary tense.

II. The conclusion, since it is the principal clause, must have its verb in the infinitive. Indicative tenses change to infinitive tenses according to 266, a. The present and perfect subjunctive of less vivid (confident) future conclusions become the future infinitive, in -ūrus esse. The imperfect and pluperfect of conclusions contrary to fact become an infinitive not elsewhere used, in -ūrus fuisse.

Examples are needed for only the conditions contrary to fact, since all others follow the regular rules of sequence and indirect discourse. Sī pugnāret eum laudārem, if he were fighting I should praise him, becomes, after either dīcit or dīxit, sī pugnāret sē eum laudātūrum fuisse; sī pugnāvisset eum laudāvissem, if he had fought I should have praised him, becomes, after either dīcit or dīxit, sī pugnāvisset sē eum laudātūrum fuisse.

C. IMPLIED INDIRECT DISCOURSE

273. RULE: The subjunctive may be used in any subordinate clause to imply that it is a quotation.

This is the reason for the subjunctive in causal clauses with quod, etc. (244) It is also especially common in clauses depending on purpose clauses and substantive clauses of desire (purpose). Examples: Caesar frūmentum quod essent pollicitī flāgitāre (I, 16, 1), Caesar kept demanding the grain which (as he said) they had promised; erat eī praeceptum nē proelium committeret nisi ipsīus cōpiae vīsae essent (I, 23, 8), he had been commanded not to give battle unless Caesar's forces should be seen (Caesar had said nisi meae copiae visae erunt, unless my forces shall be seen).

SUBJUNCTIVE BY ATTRACTION

274. RULE: Sometimes a verb that would otherwise stand in the indicative is put in the subjunctive only because it depends on another subjunctive or on an infinitive.

Example: cum certissimae rēs accēderent, quod Helvētiōs trādūxisset (I, 19, 1), since the most clearly proven facts were added (namely) that he had led the Helvetii.

THE INFINITIVE

A. WITHOUT SUBJECT ACCUSATIVE

COMPLEMENTARY INFINITIVE

275. RULE: Many verbs which imply another action of the same subject take a present infinitive to complete their meaning.

Such are verbs meaning be able, be accustomed, attempt, begin, cease, dare, determine, ought, wish, and the like. But with some of these verbs a substantive clause of desire (purpose) is often used. See 228, a. Examples: īre potest, he can go; īre potuit, he could have gone, literally he was able to go; īre dēbet, he ought to go; cōnstituērunt comparāre (I, 3, 2), they determined to prepare.

a. As these verbs have no subject accusative, either expressed or understood, a predicate noun or adjective must agree with the nominative subject of the principal verb. Example: fortis esse cōnātur, he tries to be brave.

INFINITIVE AS SUBJECT

276. The present infinitive (rarely the perfect) without an expressed subject accusative may be used as the subject of the verbs mentioned in 278. With licet, it is permitted, the dative is commonly used instead of a subject accusative. Examples: īre oportet, one must go, literally to go is right; īre oportuit, one ought to have gone (205, a), literally to go was right; eī īre licuit, he might have gone, literally to go was permitted to him; īre necesse est, one must go.

a. Since a subject accusative is easily supplied in thought with these infinitives, a predicate noun or adjective is regularly in the accusative. But with licet a predicate is commonly dative. Examples: fortem esse oportet, one ought to be brave; virō licet esse fortī (fortem), a man may be brave, lit. it is permitted to a man to be brave.

B. WITH SUBJECT ACCUSATIVE

277. The infinitive with a subject accusative (123) forms an infinitive clause (186).

INFINITIVE CLAUSE AS SUBJECT

278. RULE: The present infinitive (rarely the perfect) with subject accusative may be used as the subject of such impersonal verbs as decet, libet, oportet, placet, praestat, vīsum est, and of est with a predicate noun or adjective.

But with some of these verbs the subjunctive is also used. See 228, a, and 229, c. As stated in 276, the subject accusative is not always expressed with these verbs, and with licet the dative is much more common. Examples: mē īre oportet, I ought to go; Caesarem īre oportuit, Caesar ought to have gone (205, a); mē īre necesse est, I must go.

INFINITIVE CLAUSE AS OBJECT

279. RULE: The infinitive in all its tenses, with subject accusative is used as the object of verbs of knowing, learning, and telling.

This is indirect discourse. For examples see 205 and 266.

a. When these verbs are made passive either the personal construction or the impersonal is possible; but the personal is the more common in the uncompounded tenses. Examples: (personal) Caesar vēnisse fertur, Caesar is said to have come; (impersonal) Caesarem vēnisse dictum est, it has been said that Caesar came.

280. Note the use of the accusative and infinitive with the following verbs.

a. Regularly with iubeō, order, vetō, forbid, patior, sinō, permit, which might be expected to take the substantive clause of desire (228, a). Example: mīlitēs pugnāre iussit, he ordered the soldiers to fight.

b. With volō, nōlō, mālō, cupiō, regularly when the subject of the infinitive is not the same as that of the principal verb, sometimes when it is the same (compare 275). Examples: volō eum īre, I wish him to go; cupiō mē esse clēmentem (Cic. Cat. I, 4), I desire to be merciful.

c. Regularly the accusative and future infinitive with verbs of hoping and promising. But posse may be used instead of a future infinitive, after verbs of hoping, because possum implies futurity. Examples: id sēsē effectūrōs spērābant (VII, 26, 4), lit. they hoped that they could accomplish this, = they hoped to accomplish this; sēsē potīrī posse spērant (I, 3, 22), they hoped that they could get possession.

C. WITH SUBJECT NOMINATIVE

281. Historical Infinitive. RULE: The infinitive is sometimes used with a nominative subject, as an equivalent for an independent past indicative.

Example: cotīdiē Caesar frūmentum flāgitāre (I, 16, 1), Caesar daily demanded the grain.

PARTICIPLES

282. Participles are verbal adjectives and are used either attributively or predicatively (157). Like other adjectives they may be used substantively (158). They may govern cases just as the finite verb does. For the meanings of their tenses see 205.

283. Participles are often used in Latin where English uses a coordinate or a subordinate clause. Only the meaning of the sentence shows what conjunction to use in translating. Examples: victus fūgit may mean he was conquered and fled, when he had been conquered he fled, or because he had been conquered he fled; victus fugiet may be translated by similar clauses, or by if he is conquered he will flee. See also the examples under 150.

PRESENT PARTICIPLE

284. The present active participle corresponds in meaning to the English present participle, but is much less frequently used. There is no present passive participle.

a. Therefore such forms as seeing, usually, and such forms as being seen, always, must be translated into Latin otherwise than by a present participle.

1. Present participles are often used in English where the action is really completed before the action of the verb: Latin then uses the perfect participle. For example, seeing this he fled, means having seen, etc., and may be translated hōc vīsō (150) fūgit, lit. this having been seen

2. Present participles are very often used in English where Latin uses dum with the present indicative (234, a,) or cum with the imperfect (or pluperfect) subjunctive (242, a). Examples: he was killed (while) fighting, sometimes pugnāns occīsus est, usually either dum pugnat occīsus est, or cum pugnāret, occīsus est; seeing this he fled, cum hoc vīdisset fūgit.

b. Remember that he is running is always currit, never est currēns.

285. FUTURE PARTICIPLES

I. The future active participle is used by Caesar and Cicero only with some form of sum, making either the active periphrastic conjugation (75 and 196) or the future active infinitive. Example: praeter quod sēcum portātūrī erant (I, 5, 5), lit. except what they were about to take with them, = except what they intended, etc.

II. The future passive participle has the same form as the gerundive (288), but in usage is quite distinct. It has two uses.

a. The future passive participle is used with the verb sum to form the passive periphrastic conjugation (76). This denotes duty or necessity; as laudandus est, he is to be praised, he must (ought, deserves to) be praised. The English form is usually active: remember that the Latin is passive. The agent is regularly dative (118). Intransitive verbs must be used impersonally. Examples: Caesar est mihi laudandus, lit. Caesar must be praised by me, = I must praise Caesar; mihi pugnandum fuit (impersonal), lit. it had to be fought by me, = I had to fight.

b. The future passive participle is sometimes used, to denote purpose, in agreement with the objects of verbs meaning to have (a thing done) or to undertake (to do a thing); especially cūrō, cause have (literally take care), dō, give over, suscipiō, undertake. Examples: pontem faciendum cūrat (I, 13, 2), he had a bridge made; cōnsulibus senātus rem pūblicam dēfendendam dedit, the senate entrusted the defense of the state to the consuls.

PERFECT PARTICIPLE

286. Latin has a perfect passive participle, corresponding to such English forms as seen or having been seen, but no perfect active participle (but see a), corresponding to such English forms as having seen. The English perfect active participle with a direct object can usually be translated into Latin by putting the English object in the ablative and using the passive participle in agreement with it (ablative absolute, 150). Examples: vīsus fūgit, having been seen he fled; Caesare vīsō fūgit, having seen Caesar he fled; literally, Caesar having been seen he fled. See also 150.

a. But the perfect passive form of deponent verbs usually (not always) has an active meaning, so that with these verbs the change described in 286 is not to be made. Example: Caesarem cōnspicātus fūgit, having seen Caesar he fled.

b. The perfect passive participle is sometimes used in agreement with the object of habeō. The meaning is nearly the same as that of the past active tenses of the simple verb; but the resulting fact is emphasized, rather than the past act. Example: magnās cōpiās coāctās habet, he has great forces (which he has) collected, or he has collected great forces (and still has them); while magnās cōpiās coēgit, he (has) collected great forces, leaves it uncertain whether he still has them.

c. Note the translation of such phrases as post urbem conditam, after the founding of the city; literally, after the city founded.

GERUND

287. The gerund is an active verbal noun and corresponds to the English verbal nouns in -ing. It governs the case that is governed by the finite forms of the verb; but see 289, II. Examples: fugiendī causā (99, a), for the sake of fleeing; ad persuādendum eī (115), for persuading him; urbem videndī causā, for the sake of seeing the city.

GERUNDIVE

288. The gerundive is a passive verbal adjective, and must agree with its noun in gender, number, and case. For the same form used as a future passive participle, see 285, II.

The gerundive construction is commonly used in place of the gerund with a direct object. In this construction the English direct object takes the Latin case which the gerund would have, and the gerundive agrees with it. There is no exact English equivalent; the translation is the same as for a gerund with a direct object. For example, in the gerund construction urbem videndī causā, videndī is the genitive modifying causā, and urbem is the direct object of videndī. In the gerundive construction urbis videndae causā, urbis is the genitive modifying causā and videndae agrees with urbis, literally for the sake of the city to be seen. Both alike must be translated for the sake of seeing the city.

CHOICE OF CONSTRUCTION

289. I. RULE: If the verb is intransitive the gerund must be used.

The gerundive is passive, and intransitive verbs can be used in the passive only impersonally. Example: eī crēdendī causā, for the sake of believing him (115).

a. But the gerundive of ūtor, fruor, fungor, potior, and vēscor (145) is used. Example: spēs potiundī oppidī (II, 7, 5), hope of taking the town.

II. RULE: If the verb is used transitively the gerundive construction is more common, and must always be used after a preposition.

A direct object is sometimes used with a gerund in the genitive or the ablative without a preposition. Examples: (always) ad effēminandōs animōs (I, 1, 8), to weakening the courage; (usually) urbis videndae causā, for the sake of seeing the city; sometimes urbem videndī causā, for the sake of seeing the city.

USE OF CASES

290. Neither the gerund nor the gerundive is used as the subject or direct object of verbs.

291. The Genitive is used with nouns and adjectives. With causā and grātiā it forms a common expression of purpose. Examples: bellandī cupiditās, a desire of fighting; Caesaris (or Caesarem) videndī cupidus, desirous of seeing Caesar; bellandī causā vēnit, he came to fight (for the sake of fighting).

a. If the substantive is a personal or reflexive pronoun, an irregular construction is used,—meī, tuī, suī, nostrī, or vestrī with a genitive in -I (sometimes called gerund, sometimes gerundive), regardless of gender and number. Example: suī cōnservandī causā, for the sake of saving themselves The usual gerund would be sē cōnservandī; the gerundive suī cōnservandōrum.

292. The Dative is very rare.

293. The Accusative is used with a few prepositions, especially ad expressing purpose. Examples: parātus ad proficīscendum, ready to set out; ad Caesarem videndum (gerundive, see 289, II), venit, he came to see Caesar.

294. The Ablative is used, with the prepositions ab, dē, ex, in, and as the ablative of means or cause. Examples: in quaerendō reperiēbat, in questioning (them) he learned; lapidibus subministrandīs (III, 25, 4), by furnishing stones.

THE SUPINE

295. RULE: The Accusative of the supine is used after verbs of motion to express purpose.

It may govern a direct object. Examples: grātulātum vēnērunt (I, 30, 2), they came to offer congratulations; lēgātōs mittunt rogātum auxilium (I, 11, 4), they sent envoys to ask aid.

296. RULE: The Ablative of the supine is used as an ablative of specification (149).

It does not take a direct object. The supine of the verbs audiō, cognōscō, dīcō, faciō, videō, is most commonly found; and with the adjectives facilis, difficilis, crēdibilis, incrēdibilis, iūcundus, iniūcundus, optimus, mīrābilis, and the expressions fās est, nefās est, opus est. Example: perfacile factū (I, 3, 16) lit. very easy as to the doing, = very easy to do.

THE ROMAN CALENDAR

297. The Months. The Latin names of months are adjectives, not nouns as are ours. In the times of Caesar and Cicero the names of the months were Iānuārius (-a, -um), Februārius, Mārtius, Aprīlis (-e), Maius, Iūnius, Quīntīlis, Sextīlis, September (-bris, -bre), Octōber, November, and December. Later Quīntīlis was changed to Iūlius, in honor of Julius Caesar, and Sextīlis to Augustus, in honor of the emperor Augustus.

Before 46 B. C., that is till near the death of Caesar and Cicero, March, May, July, and October had 31 days, February had 28, and each of the others had 29. In 46 B. C. Caesar reformed the calendar and gave the months their present number of days.

298. Calends, Nones, and Ides. The Romans counted the days backwards from three points in each month, the Calends, the Nones, and the Ides, instead of forward from the first as we do; that is, they called the days "the third before the Ides", "the fourth before the Calends," etc.

The Calends (Kalendae,—ārum, f. pl.) were always the first of the month. The Nones (Nōnae, -ārum, f. pl.) were the seventh, the Ides (Īdūs, -uum, f. pl.) the fifteenth of March, May, July, and October. In all other months they were the fifth and thirteenth.

299. Method of Reckoning. In reckoning dates they counted both the first day and the last day; for example, while we should speak of Monday as the second day before Wednesday, a Roman would have counted Wednesday as one, Tuesday as two, and Monday as three, and would thus have called Monday the third day before Wednesday.

In counting back from the Calends, remember that the Calends do not belong to the month in which the required day is. Add one to the number of days in the preceding month, then reckon backwards, counting both ends as usual.

300. Method of Expressing Dates. An idiomatic formula is commonly used, which can neither be parsed nor translated literally; for example a. d. IV. Īd. Iān. = ante diem quārtum Īdūs Iānuāriās. The logical, but less usual form is diē quārtō ante Īdūs Iānuāriās, on the fourth day before the Ides of January. For examples take the dates:

Jan. 1 = Kal. Iān.
(13 + 1 − 4 = 10) Jan. 10 = a. d. iv. Īd. Iān.	(13 + 1 − 10 = 4).
(28 + 2 − 8 = 22) Feb. 22 = a. d. viii. Kal. Mār.	(28 + 2 − 22 = 8).
(7 + 1 − 4 = 4) July 4 = a. d. iv. Nōn. Iūl.	(7 + 1 − 4 = 4).

VOCABULARY

VOCABULARY

In this vocabulary the figures 1, 2, and 4, following verbs, mean that the principal parts are formed like those of laudō, moneō, and audiō, respectively; or, if the verb is deponent, like those of hortor, vereor, and partior (App. 73).

To all words occurring in the first four books of the text, numbers are affixed, showing the book and chapter of first occurrence. If the word occurs first in chapters 30-54 of Book I, the place of its second occurrence is also given. Words unaccompanied by reference numbers do not occur in the first four books.

After geographical names letters are given, enclosed in parentheses. They correspond to letters on the margin of the general map, and thus serve as an index to the position of the names on the map.

Pronunciation of Proper Names. It is generally agreed that the English pronunciation of proper names should be used in translation; but as no modern grammar gives the rules for the English pronunciation, the greatest confusion exists in practice. Therefore the pronunciation of all proper names is indicated in parentheses. To indicate the sounds of vowels, diacritical marks are used with the following values:

ă = a in *m*a*t*.	ĕ = e in *m*e*t*.	ŏ = o in *n*o*t*e.
ā = a in *m*a*te*.	ē = e in *f*e*rn*.	ō = o in *o*r.
ä = a in *a*r*m*.	ĭ = i in *i*s.	ŭ = u in *u*p.
		ụ = u in r*u*de.

y has the sounds of i, and is used in indicating pronunciation only as the consonant (= y in youth), or to indicate an i sound so rapidly uttered that it is barely distinguishable from the consonant y, as in Lūcius = lū′shyŭs.

It must be understood, however, that unaccented syllables are so hastily pronounced that their vowel sounds are usually somewhat indistinct.

The main accent is indicated by a single mark (′), the lighter, secondary accent by a double mark (″).

In giving tribe names it is best to use always the Latin forms of the names (Nervii, Helvetii, etc.), rather than the anglicized forms (Nervians, Helvetians, etc.). Most of these anglicized forms have no warrant in good English usage, none has much warrant. The few that are possible are given in the vocabulary, but are not recommended for use. Modern geographical names may well be used, so far as they are familiar.
